2019 ROOSTERTAIL MUSIC FESTIVAL

INSIDE TODAY

Green flag ready to drop on Regatta

Courier staff report

Driving around Madison's downtown and hilltop will change temporarily as the area readies for the Madison Regatta, the Roostertail Music Festival and the Madison Courier 10K Run/Walk.

Here is a list of the changes to remember and the dates:

Madison-Milton bridge walkway

While boats are racing during the Regatta and during the Saturday, July 6 Fireworks show, the bridge walkway over the Ohio River will be closed, Madison Police Chief Jeremey Perkins said.

Monday, July 1 — Sunday, July 7

Vaughn Drive, from the Milton-Madison Bridge to Mill Street, closed from 8 a.m. Monday, July 1 through 11:59 a.m. Monday, July 8, for the Madison Regatta and Roostertail Music Festival.

Tuesday, July 2

Main Street, from Jefferson to Walnut streets, closed from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday, July 2, for the Madison Regatta Waterball Fight.

Wednesday, July 3

First Street, from Central Avenue to West Street, closed from 8 a.m. Wednesday, July 3. through 8 p.m. Sunday, July 7, for the Madison Regatta and Roostertail Music Festival.

Friday, July 5

In addition, no parking will be allowed on the east and west sides of Main Street from East to Cragmont streets, the 400 block of St. Michael's Avenue, the 400 block of Wall Street and the north side of the 800 block of West Third Street between Cragmont and Wall streets, for the Madison Regatta Parade.

Friday, July 5 through Sunday, July 7

City of Madison parking lot at Second and Jefferson streets, closed and under supervision and control of the Madison Regatta Inc. from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

Saturday, July 6

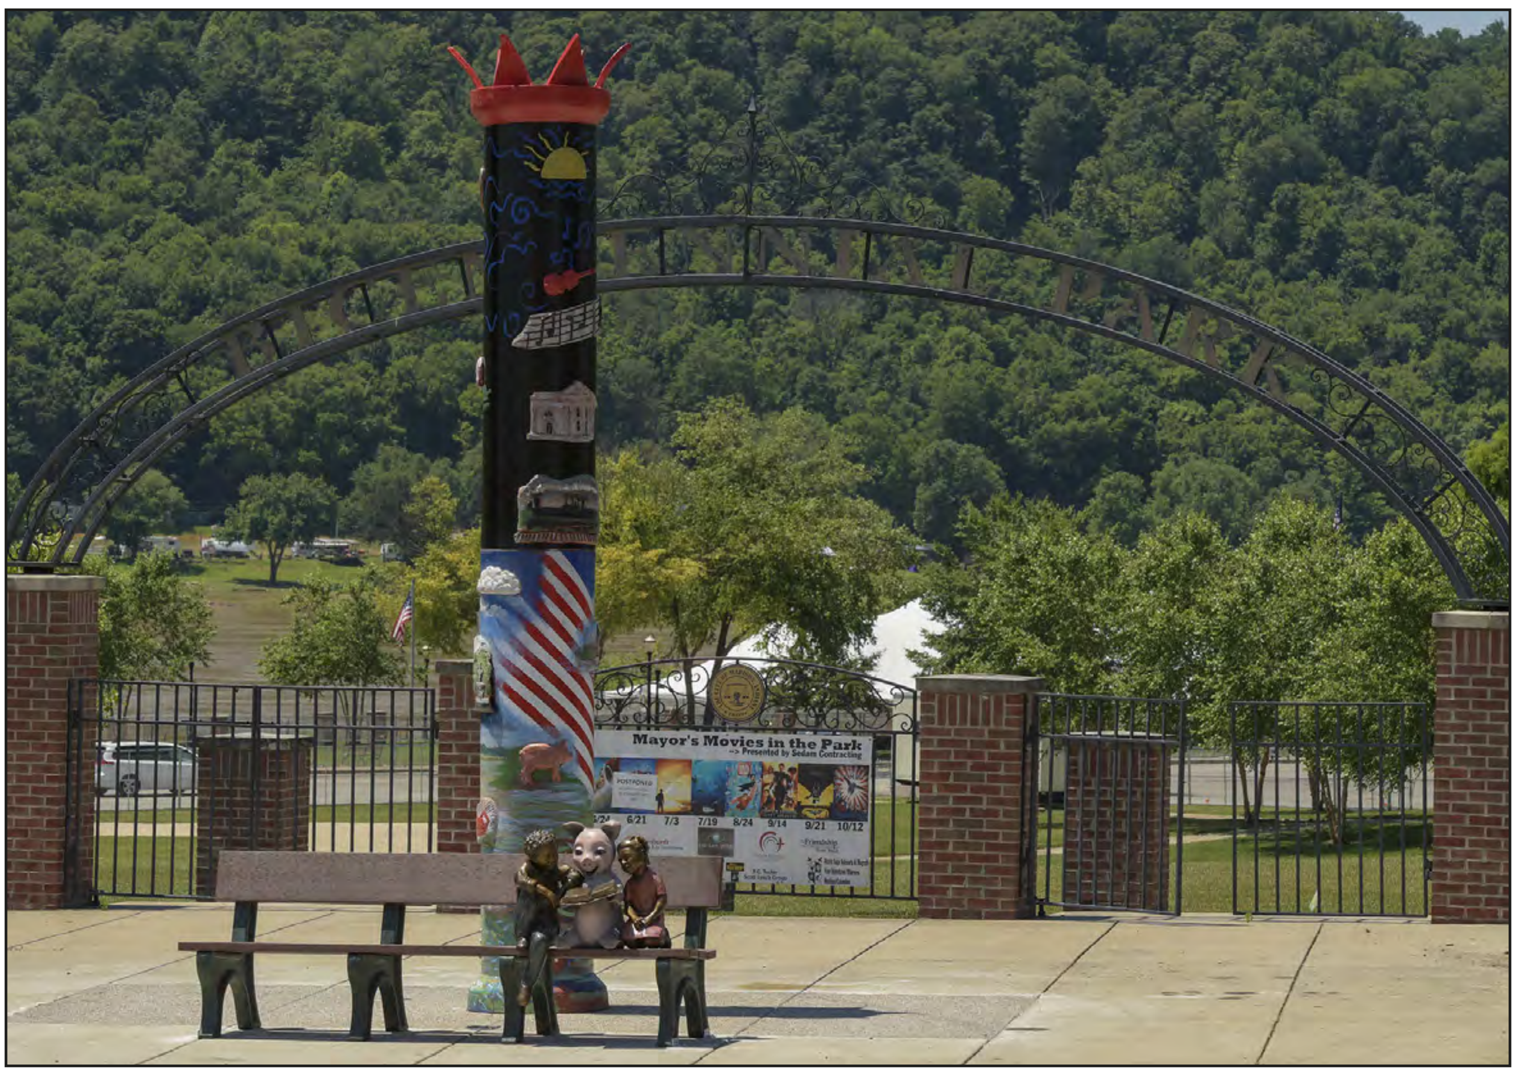
Cub Trail, Wilson Avenue between Clifty and Lanier drives and Lanier Drive between Wilson Avenue and the entrance to Madison State Hospital, from 7 a.m. to noon, for the Madison Courier 10K Run/Walk. In addition, access roads to Madison State Hospital will be closed until completion of the race.

421 changes; SR 7 still closed

Work will stop on the U.S. 421 approaches project on Madison's east side during Independence Day next week. Crews working near Sering Street/State Road 56, East Second Street and Harrison Street will not be working from Wednesday, July 3 until Monday, July 8. This work is part of the construction of a new street to and from the Madison-Milton bridge.

On the west end of downtown, State Road 7 (Cragmont Street) will remain closed from Main Street (State Road 56) to Clifty Drive (State Road 62) for a major road project.

200 years sitting by the river



The long-awaited sculpture to celebrate the bicentennial of Madison started to take shape this week at the entrance to Bicentennial Park. Sculptor Mike Major from Urbana, Ohio, brought the pieces of the sculpture to the city along with his tools to put the parts of the artwork in place and add finishing touches. The combined smokestack and bench have been made possible by the Bicentennial Legacy Gift Committee. The committee, the Jefferson County Public Library and the Madison Area Arts Alliance worked together to arrange for the piece of art that was commissioned 10 years after the city celebrated its bicentennial. Meant to look like the smokestack of a steamboat, the ceramic tower is built with a 3-D mural depicting things representing Madison. The bench is big enough for people to sit on with bronze statues of two children and a pig at one end, reading a book. Formal dedication of the sculpture will be July 26. Madison woman with kids in car charged with drug possession

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

A Madison woman is facing drug charges after a search of her vehicle produced a residual amount of methamphetamine during a traffic stop Wednesday afternoon on Michigan Road.

Lila M. Kilby, 36, was stopped by Madison police while traveling north on Michigan Road at 12:35 p.m. after an officer noticed an expired temporary plate on Kilby's Chevrolet Blazer. The vehicle was also occupied by Kilby's two young daughters and an adult male.

Officer Brittany Tate approached the vehicle and was told Kilby did not have her driver's license with her. However, an identification check through the central dispatch indicated an active Jefferson County warrant for Kilby on a failure to appear in court charge for Unlawful use of a Legend Drug.

Tate took Kilby into custody and while doing so noticed a small bag containing a powered substance inside the driver's side door.

Since Kilby's vehicle had no proof of registration or insurance, and there was no valid driver in the vehicle, police had to tow the vehicle. As part of that process, Kilby denied officers' consent to search the vehicle but the department's drug dog, K-9 Champi, conducted an open air sniff of the vehicle, indicating a positive alert for narcotics.

A subsequent search of the vehicle found a small contact lens case inside the center console that contained a crystal-like residue that field tested positive for methamphetamine. Kilby was then charged with Possession of Methamphetamine, a Level 5 felony, since there were children in the vehicle.

The case was investigated by Tate, who was assisted at the scene by K-9 Officer Brad Demaree and K-9 Champi.

Switzerland Co. makes 2nd arrest of soliciting minors online

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

Authorities in Switzerland County have made their second arrest in less than a week on charges of using online social media to solicit sex with a minor.

The latest charges, part of an ongoing computer crimes investigation being conducted by the Switzerland County Sheriff's Office, Indiana State Police and the Vevay Police Department, resulted in the arrest of Harry L. Waller, 58, of Bennington. Detectives from Switzerland County arrested Waller on Monday, June 24, charging him with Attempted Sexual Misconduct with a Minor, a Level 4 felony; and Dissemination of Matter Harmful to a Minor, a Level 6 felony.

The sexual misconduct charge stems from Waller allegedly arranging to have sexual contact with a minor and traveling to meet the minor. However, there was no minor and Waller was met by police who arrested him at that time.

Waller appeared in Switzerland County Circuit Court on Wednesday, June 26 and is being held in the Switzerland County Jail on a $20,000 cash bond.

On June 18 detectives from Switzerland County had arrested Jack D. Shelley, 48, of Madison, on two counts of Child Solicitation, both Level 5 felonies, and two counts of Dissemination of Matter Harmful to a Minor, both Level 6 felonies.

Switzerland County Sheriff Brian L. Morton has said his department, like a lot others, conducts ongoing operations to identify suspects seeking to contact underage individuals through social media for illegal purposes and that as those investigations identify new suspects additional arrests could be forthcoming.

Health officials urge testing after New Albany wrestling event

STATE BRIEFS

Indiana

NEW ALBANY — Health officials are warning attendees at a recent wrestling event to get tested for HIV and hepatitis C because of possible exposure to blood-borne pathogens. The Floyd County Health Department said those at last Sunday's "Welcome to the Wreckroom" event in New Albany may have been exposed to blood or bodily fluids. Floyd County Health Officer Tom Harris said the warning was triggered by a complaint from someone who attended. He said it's "a risk for all concerned." The event's co-promoter John Glenn said all wrestlers are "tested regularly" for the "safety of the people who come to our shows and for the guys in the ring as well."

Ex-mayor wins ruling in open records dispute

COLUMBUS — A judge has ruled in favor of a former mayor of Columbus whose efforts to obtain public records ended up in court. Former Mayor Kristen Brown sued in 2017 after she said the city's police department failed to comply with her request for information related to a 2016 crash involving law enforcement. Special Judge Richard Poynter ruled this month that Brown will get attorney's fees and court costs. The court said she was given "insufficient detail" about her request. Brown told WRTV-TV they've "wasted so much taxpayer money" and attorney's fees are approaching $50,000. City of Columbus attorney Alan Whitted said the city hasn't decided whether to appeal. In a statement, he notes that Brown received the police report during litigation.

Excessive seizure case undergoing new appeal

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indiana Supreme Court is taking up again the appeal of a man whose $42,000 Land Rover was seized when police arrested him for selling about $400 worth of heroin. Friday's state court hearing comes after the U.S. Supreme Court sided earlier this year with Tyson Timbs, of Marion, by ruling the Constitution's ban on excessive fines applies to the states. Timbs pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a year of house arrest. His biggest loss was the vehicle he bought with life insurance money he received after his father died. A Grant County judge ruled taking the vehicle was disproportionate to the crime's severity. But Indiana's top court said the U.S. Supreme Court had never before ruled that states were covered by Eighth Amendment's ban on excessive fines.

Indiana woman dies in rafting accident

DURANGO, Colorado — Authorities have released the name of a woman who died in a rafting accident on a guided trip on the San Juan River in southwest Colorado. The Durango Herald reported Amy Kirsch, 43, of Evansville was thrown from a raft in a whitewater section of the river north of Pagosa Springs on June 20. Kirsch, who was with her husband and three teenage children, was swept about three miles downstream. A guide in another boat caught up to her on an island in the river and started CPR. Kirsch was wearing a life jacket, a helmet and either a wetsuit or drysuit when she fell into the water.

2 separate Indy police chases end in fatalities

INDIANAPOLIS — Police say two separate police chases in Indianapolis within the span of several hours ended in fatal crashes. The first happened after officers tried to stop a vehicle about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday on the city's southwest side. Police say the officers halted their pursuit because the vehicle was being driven erratically, but moments later it crashed and rolled at an intersection. One person died and a man and woman were taken to hospital. Early Thursday, police tried to stop a speeding car that was weaving in and out of traffic on the city's east side. Shortly after the pursuit began the driver crashed into a utility pole and the car burst into flames. The driver died. Ammunition in the car also exploded, forcing officers to take cover.

Cleanup continues at river port site

LAWRENCEBURG — Indiana officials are allowing more time for environmental cleanup of the Ohio River site that they've targeted for a possible new shipping port. Gov. Eric Holcomb's office said the state has extended until the end of this year its option to buy up to 725 acres near Lawrenceburg, just west of the Indiana-Ohio state line. A development company bought the land after Indiana Michigan Power Co. closed its Tanners Creek coal-fired electricity generating plant in 2015. The Ports of Indiana Commission first reached its $8 million deal for the site in 2017. It expected to complete the purchase by the end of 2018 but had previously extended that deadline until the end of this month. Holcomb supports the new port, but a timeline and funding source remain undecided.

Court says IBM owes state more than $70M

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana's Supreme Court has decided IBM Corp. must pay the state more than $70 million over the company's failed effort to automate much of the state's welfare services. The court ruling released Wednesday upholds lower court rulings in the case that began in 2010 when Indiana and New York-based IBM sued each other after then-Gov. Mitch Daniels canceled the company's $1.3 billion contract to privatize and automate the processing of applications for food stamps, Medicaid and other benefits. The state appeals court affirmed in September a Marion County judge's decision awarding the state $128 million in damages while crediting IBM with nearly $50 million in fees owed by the state. The Supreme Court rejected IBM's arguments that it was owed more interest payments from the state.

Man crashes stolen car with teen girl inside

LEXINGTON — Kentucky police were in pursuit of a stolen car with a 14-year-old girl inside when the driver crossed a median and crashed into a guardrail. News outlets report Thomas Oxendine, 33, had been arguing with the teen's stepmother Thursday when she pulled into a gas station. He then drove away with her car. Lexington police Sgt. Donnell Gordon said police pursued Oxendine until he crashed and tried to run away. Officers caught him on foot. The teenager wasn't injured. Oxendine is charged with kidnapping, wanton endangerment and evading police. WTVQ reported Oxendine also was arrested for wanton endangerment last year, after allegedly driving his car toward officers during a traffic stop.

New commander for Fort Campbell

FORT CAMPBELL — Fort Campbell soldiers assigned to 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 101st Airborne Division, are welcoming a new commander. A statement from the post on the Kentucky-Tennessee line said Col. Joseph Escandon will pass the command to Col. Michael Kovacevic in a ceremony Friday on the division parade field. Escandon said it has been "an honor and privilege" to command the unit for the last two years. The brigade has a global mission and has soldiers serving in Europe and Africa in addition to those at Fort Campbell.

Judge returns 'sickout' suit to state court

FRANKFORT — A lawsuit challenging the use of Kentucky labor law to obtain the names of teachers who participated in "sickouts" has been sent back to state court. U.S. District Judge Danny Reeves on Thursday returned the case to Franklin Circuit Court. The suit says Gov. Matt Bevin's administration unlawfully used labor law to seek the names and records of teachers. It stems from protests at Kentucky's Capitol that forced some schools to close. Attorney General Andy Beshear said he'll press the case to ensure no teacher is fined as a result of sickouts. Beshear is challenging Bevin in this year's gubernatorial election. Bevin spokeswoman Elizabeth Kuhn said the ruling doesn't address the merits of the case and "simply moves the case to state court."

Woman, 18, fatally shoots sister, 16

PIKEVILLE — Pike County Deputy Coroner Zeb Hamilton told WKYT-TV that 16-year-old Gabrielle May McCoy died Wednesday night from a gunshot wound. Hamilton said she was accidentally shot by her 18-year-old sister at her home in the Kimper community. Kentucky State Police said in a statement that the shooting happened while the firearm was being examined. Police said an investigation continues but no foul play is suspected and no charges have been filed.

Murray scholarship honors shooting victim

MURRAY— A new scholarship has been established at Murray State University to honor a school shooting victim. A statement from the school said the Preston Cope Memorial Scholarship was established through fundraising and gifts from the 15-year-old boy's family and friends. Cope was one of two teens killed during a shooting last year at Marshall County High School. The scholarship will help students from Marshall County who "share in Preston's enthusiasm for life and service to others" while attending Murray State. To be eligible for the scholarship, students must be full-time, first-year freshmen who graduated from Marshall County High School with at least a 3.0 grade point average and who were active in extracurricular activities and community service. Preference will be given to students majoring in history or education.

Probation and parole officers to get pay hike

LEXINGTON — Kentucky officials say probation and parole officers are the first state employees to see their salaries increase because of an adjustment in the state's salary schedule. Gov. Matt Bevin and his personnel secretary on Wednesday announced the first adjustment to the state's salary schedule in more than a decade. State Personnel Secretary Thomas Stephens said hundreds of probation and parole officers are getting pay raises. He says the salary bumps will help recruit and retain the officers. He says the agency has been hit by high turnover rates. Other state agencies can apply to personnel and budget officials in seeking salary adjustments. Stephens said high turnover rates will be a key factor in reviewing requests. Bevin was flanked by a number of probation and parole officers in making the announcement in Lexington.

Man refuses to drop gun, shot by police

CAMPTON — Kentucky State Police say a trooper fatally shot a man who refused to drop a gun. A statement from police said officers were serving a warrant at a home in Wolfe County when a confrontation occurred with a man in the residence. Police say the man retrieved a gun and refused "loud verbal commands" to drop the weapon. Troopers fired, striking him. The man's name wasn't immediately released. Police say Wolfe County Coroner Frankie Porter said he was dead at the scene. News outlets report it isn't clear whether the man shot was the subject of the initial investigation. The shooting remains under investigation.

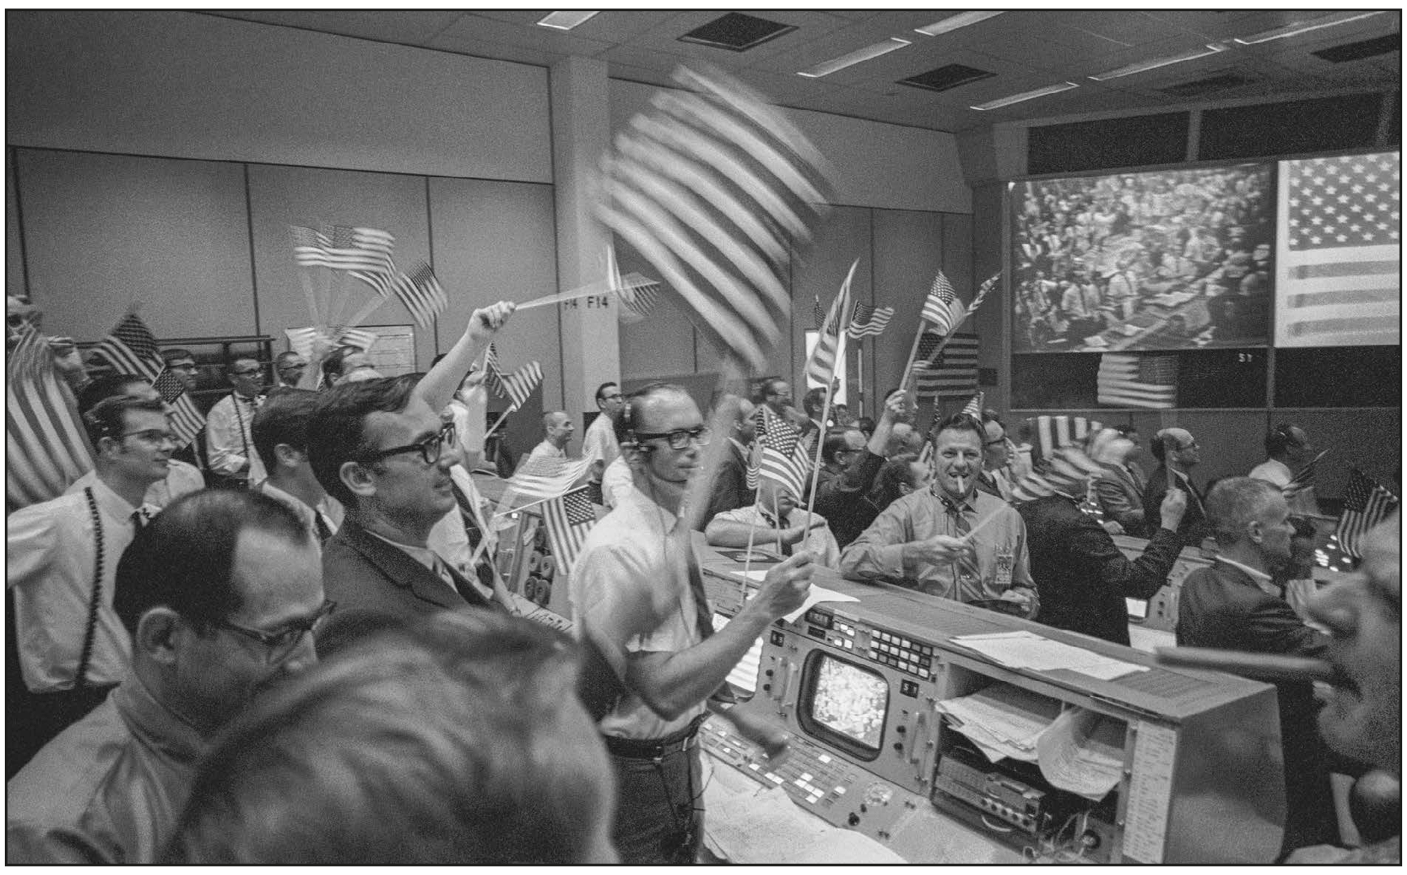
Restored Mission Control comes alive 50 years after Apollo

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer



BACK IN THE DAY: An overall view of the Mission Operations Control Room in the Mission Control Center, Building 30, of the Manned Spacecraft Center showing the flight controllers celebrating the successful conclusion of the Apollo 11 lunar landing mission on July 24, 1969 (NASA photo)

HOUSTON — Gone is the haze of cigarette, cigar and pipe smoke. Gone are the coffee, soda and pizza stains. With only a few exceptions, NASA's Apollo-era Mission Control has been restored to the way it looked 50 years ago when two men landed on the moon.

It gets the stamp of approval from retired flight director Gene Kranz, a man for whom failure — or even a minor oversight — is never an option.

Seated at the console where he ruled over Apollo 11, Apollo 13 and so many other astronaut missions, Kranz pointed out that a phone was missing behind him. And he said the air vents used to be black from all the smoke, not sparkly clean like they are now.

Those couple of details aside, Kranz could close, then open his eyes, and transport himself back to July 20, 1969, and Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin's momentous moon landing.

"When I sit down here and I'm in the chair at the console ... I hear these words, 'Houston, Tranquility Base here. The Eagle has landed,'" Kranz said during a sneak preview at NASA's Johnson Space Center.

With all the empty seats, the room reminds him of a shift change when flight controllers would hit the restroom.

"It's just nice to see the thing come alive again," said Kranz, who titled his autobiography, "Failure is Not an Option."

Friday's grand opening — just three weeks shy of the 50th anniversary of humanity's first otherworldly footsteps — culminates years of work and millions in donations. It opens to the public Monday.

Meticulously recreated down to the tan carpeting, gray-green wallpaper, white ceiling panels, woven-cushioned seats, amber glass ashtrays and retro coffee cups, Project Apollo's Mission Operations Control Room never looked — or smelled — so good.

The goal was "to capture the look and feel of July of '69," said NASA's restoration project manager Jim Thornton.

"The place is designated a National Historic Landmark," he said. "It's not for the brick and mortar of the building, it's for the amazing feats that happened inside of the building."

Johnson's historic preservation officer, Sandra Tetley, strove for accuracy. Her quest began in 2013, after the room had fallen into neglect. It was last used for space shuttle flights in the 1990s, then abandoned and opened to tourists.

The restoration effort finally got traction in 2017. The room was closed, and construction began. More than $5 million was raised, most of it donations. The city of Webster across the street kicked in $3.5 million.

Tetley and her team interviewed flight controllers and directors now in their 70s and 80s. They pored through old pictures and brought in specialists in paint, wallpaper, carpeting, electricity and upholstery. Original swatches of carpet and wallpaper and an original ceiling tile turned up.

Intent on authenticity, they scoured eBay and vintage shops for ashtrays and cups and turned to 3D-laser printing to recreate lids for the back-of-the-seat ashtrays in the glassed-in visitors' section overlooking the control room. Old binders for reams of paper were collected. Seat cushions were handwoven. Ceiling tiles were hand stamped.

Carpeting was custom ordered with special tufting and extra yarn, then cut into 28-inch squares. The restoration team wanted a lived-in look for the carpet and chose a shade reflecting years of nicotine discoloring.

And yes, Kranz got his missing rotary-dial wall phone.

"I fought for everything," Tetley said. "But we're getting everything we want to make it just completely historically accurate."

The green consoles were trucked to the Cosmosphere museum in Hutchinson, Kansas, for months of rehab. Cigarette butts were dug out of the consoles, along with gum wrappers and papers.

Modern LED lights and flat screens were installed to bring the consoles alive with images and flashing buttons; big screens up front will show key footage from the Apollo 11 mission.

"We're using technology to make it look old, basically," Tetley explained. LEDs also replaced the original overhead fluorescent lights that had faded the mission medallions on the walls.

With the International Space Station's Mission Control running 24/7 one floor down and work for future moonshots going on all around, Thornton said it was challenging to create a museum. But the painstaking work paid off. Some Apollo flight controllers were so moved at seeing the restored room that they teared up.

"Then we know that we've done it right," Tetley said.

There's one artifact, though, that doesn't fit July 1969. Following their 1970 aborted moon-landing mission, Apollo 13's Jim Lovell, Fred Haise and Jack Swigert presented a mirror from their spacecraft to Kranz and the rest of the control team. Ever since, the mirror had hung on a plaque above the room's water fountain "to 'reflect the image' of the people in Mission Control who got us back!" Removed during the restoration, it's now back in its original spot.

Kranz, 85, still looms large in the hot seat, where he oversaw the Eagle's landing.

"It was just absolutely our day, our time, our place," he said.

The flight controllers meet every year to celebrate the day, although their numbers are dwindling.

They're proud to have helped resuscitate their Mission Control: "Part of our legacy we're going to leave for the next generation."

Study: Retirees lose by taking Social Security at wrong time

It's tough to decide when to start taking Social Security benefits and it appears many people are shorting themselves with their choice.

A new study says only 4 percent of retirees start claiming their Social Security benefits at the most financially optimal time. Current retirees collectively will lose $3.4 trillion in potential income to fund their retirement because they started drawing benefits at a less than ideal time. That's roughly $111,000 per household, according to research by United Income, an online investment and financial planning firm.

Americans typically can start claiming their Social Security benefits as early as age 62 and most adults do so by the time they turn 63. But the size of the monthly benefit grows for each year they wait, maxing out at age 70.

It's not just a financial equation though. Deciding when to draw benefits depends on a myriad of personal factors such as age, health, other savings, marital status and plans for retirement. But the report's authors say people aren't spending enough time sorting through this process and policymakers could do more to encourage it.

"If you have the discussions, you can optimize your decisions," said Jason Fichtner, former chief economist at the Social Security Administration, one of the report's authors. "These discussions aren't necessarily happening for everyone."

Those conversations are important because Americans are increasingly in charge of their own retirement planning and Social Security is a major component. It accounts for about one-third of all income annually received by U.S. retirees. Many Americans are underprepared to supplement their retirement with their own savings. For about one-third of retirees, Social Security is their primary income.

"It is not just about increasing your income, it's about increasing your chances you'll be able to afford retirement," said Fichtner.

The researchers also estimate that elderly poverty could be cut by 50 percent if all retirees claimed Social Security at the optimal time. They suggest policymakers make changes to encourage people to claim at a more financially advantageous age, such as improved education for those eligible for Social Security or changing the terminology to indicate that benefits may increase with time.

While there is no one optimal age, the researchers found that 92 percent of retirees would be better off waiting to claim Social Security until at least their 65th birthday. The exact timing is tough to pinpoint, even varying within households depending on age and who earned more.

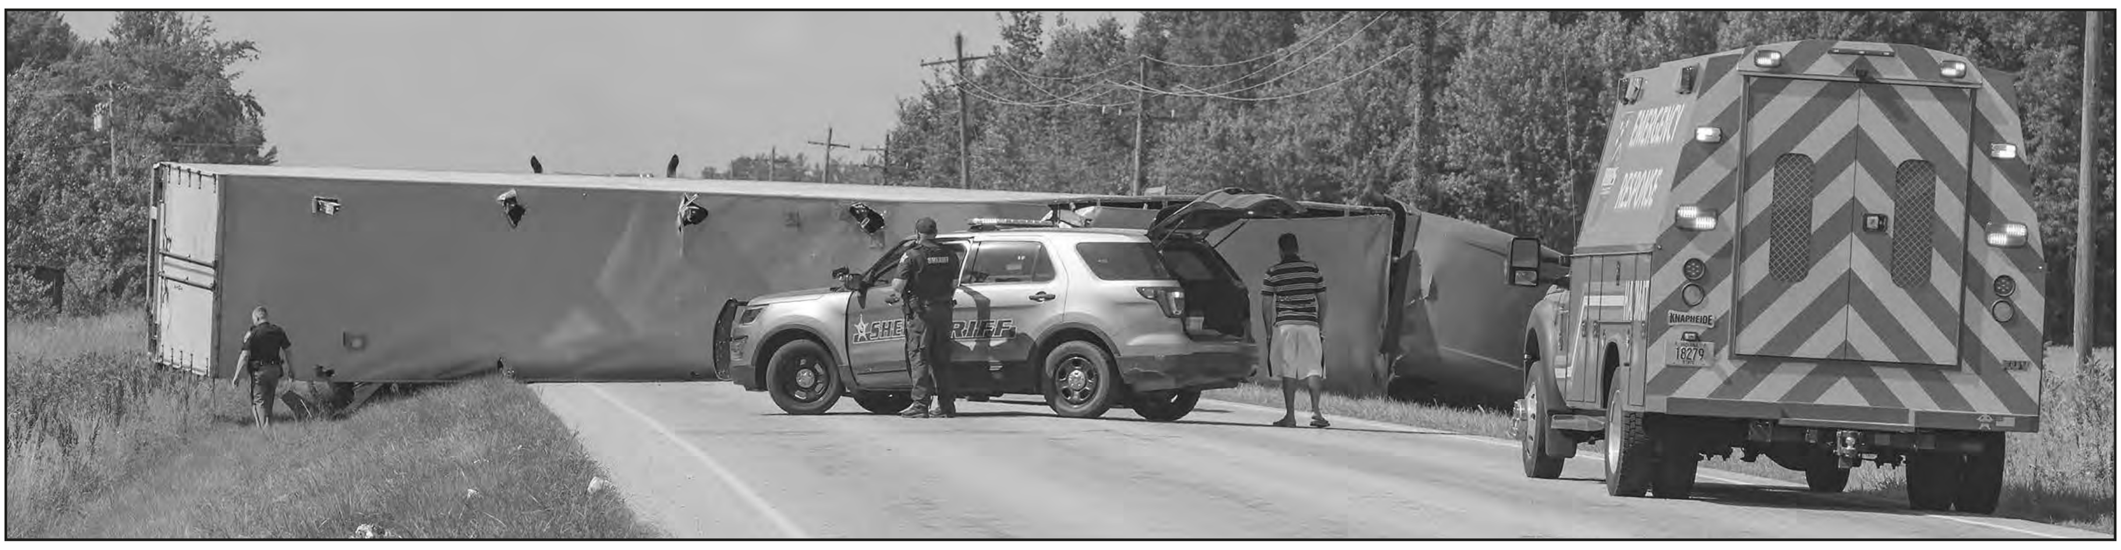
No one hurt, but 421 truck jacknife causes traffic backup



A truck jacknife about 4:30 p.m. Wednesday on U.S. 421 tied up or rerouted traffic for several hours until the cleanup could be completed. (Courier staff photos by Mark Campbell)

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

A New York driver escaped injury — and other motorists on heavily traveled U.S. 421 did too — Wednesday afternoon when a tractor trailer lost control on southbound U.S. 421 and jacknifed across the entire roadway just north of Madison.

Kulwant Singh Sangha, 35, was traveling south when the wheels of his semi dropped off the edge of the roadway and he oversteered to try to save the rig. The truck and trailer left the shouder of the roadway, jackknifed and came to rest on their side directly across both lanes of U.S. 421 just before the entrance to Jefferson Proving Grounds.

Indiana State Trooper Nate Adams said Sangha, a resident of Queens, escaped injury and was walking around and assisting with the recovery of the vehicle. The overturned truck — roof facing Madison and wheels facing Versailles — also avoided contact with other vehicles and nearby utility lines.

Adams said it was about the best case scenario for such an accident where an overturned vehicle blocks the roadway from ditch to ditch. The driver escaped injury and no other vehicles were in the vicinity to be collected by the wreckage, the truck was empty at the time of the crash and no services were interrupted for area homes and businesses. The truck wasn't even leaking fuel.

"We were very lucky. The way the truck came across the roadway if anyone had been coming the other way they would have probably been injured pretty badly," Adams said.

However, traffic had to be detoured on U.S. 421 beginning at about 4:30 p.m. until the roadway could be cleared and that put a flood of commuters who travel U.S. 421 on backroads in the area, causing delays at the intersection of U.S. 421 and North Michigan Road and East 400 North.

Health interviews expanding to rural Indiana areas

INDIANA UNIVERSITY NEWS BUREAU

BLOOMINGTON, Indiana — As part of the Precision Health Grand Challenge initiative, Indiana University will reach out to the state's rural residents to gain insights into a variety of issues that affect health in Hoosier communities.

IU researchers have selected a scientifically representative sample of Indiana households to receive interview invitations. The study began in late 2018 in Marion County and is now expanding to rural communities across the state.

Credentialed interviewers will be visiting residents, discussing the project and answering residents' questions. This combination of approaches — interviewing participants in person and collecting responses from a diverse group that accurately reflects the characteristics of Indiana's overall population — makes the study particularly unique.

A questionnaire covering topics such as exposure to environmental contaminants and attitudes toward mental health treatment is part of the study. Residents will also have the opportunity to discuss their social networks and provide a saliva sample for DNA collection.

"The Indiana University Precision Health Initiative is dedicated to curing and preventing diseases that are devastating for Hoosiers and their families," said Bernice Pescosolido, IU Distinguished Professor of Sociology, who leads the study. "The Person-to-Person Study will help us understand the factors that contribute to life-threatening conditions, and empower health professionals and individuals who seek effective treatment."

Participation in the study helps advance science and the understanding of the health and well-being of Indiana residents. Information gained from person-to-person interviews will help researchers study how biological information, behaviors, environment and social networks are related to health outcomes.

With support from the IU Center for Rural Engagement, IU researchers have already conducted several surveys with rural Indiana residents, including a focus on their attitudes regarding mental health and substance abuse and, most recently, attitudes toward and awareness of available treatment options for opioid use disorders. This work is being used to help researchers with Precision Health and other Grand Challenge initiatives improve outreach to rural communities.

The IU Precision Health Grand Challenge initiative is IU's big health care solution. Led by the IU School of Medicine, the Precision Health team is working to prevent and cure diseases through a more precise understanding of the genetic, behavioral and environmental factors that influence a person's health, with bold goals to cure one cancer and one childhood disease and to prevent one chronic illness and one neurodegenerative disease.

The IU Center for Rural Engagement improves the lives of Hoosiers through collaborative initiatives that discover and deploy scalable and flexible solutions to common challenges facing rural communities. Working in full-spectrum community innovation through research, community-engaged teaching and student service, the center builds vision, harnesses assets and cultivates sustainable leadership structures within the communities with which it engages to ensure long-term success.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Indiana – The United States is seeing an increase in the number of neurological diseases. Stroke is ranked as the fifth leading cause of death, with Alzheimer's ranked sixth. Another neurological disease – Parkinson's – affects nearly 1 million people in the U.S. each year.

Implantable neurostimulation devices are a common way to treat some of these diseases. One of the most commonly used elements in these devices is platinum microelectrodes – but it is prone to corrosion, which can reduce the functional lifetime of the devices.

Purdue University researchers have come up with a solution to help – they are adding a graphene monolayer to the devices to protect the microelectrodes.

The research is published in the June 6 edition of 2D Materials.

"I know from my industry experience that the reliability of implantable devices is a critical issue for translating technology into clinics," said Hyowon "Hugh" Lee, an assistant professor in Purdue's College of Engineering and a researcher at the Birck Nanotechnology Center, who led the research team. "This is part of our research focusing on augmenting and improving implantable devices using nano and microscale technologies for more reliable and advanced treatments. We are the first ones that I know of to address the platinum corrosion issue in neurostimulation microelectrodes."

Purdue University researchers are using graphene to help people with neurological diseases who use implantable devices. (Photo provided)

Lee said he learned about the advantage of using graphene from his colleague at Birck Nanotechnology Center, Zhihong Chen, who is an expert in graphene technology.

The team has shown the graphene monolayer to be an effective diffusion barrier and electrical conductor.

"If you attempt to deliver more charge than the electrode can handle, it can corrode the electrode and damage the surrounding tissues," Lee said. He also thinks that microscale electrodes are going to play a key role in the future with more demand for precise and targeted neurostimulation therapy. "We think neurosurgeons, neurologists, and other scientists in neuroengineering field will be able to use this electrode technology to better help patients with implantable devices for restoring eyesight, movement, and other lost functionalities."

Lee and his team are working with the Purdue Research Foundation Office of Technology Commercialization on patenting and licensing the technology.

They are looking for partners interested in licensing it.

The work aligns with Purdue's Giant Leaps celebration of the university's global advancements made in health care research as part of Purdue's 150th anniversary.

It is one of the four themes of the yearlong celebration's Ideas Festival, designed to showcase Purdue as an intellectual center solving real-world issues.

The Purdue Research Foundation Office of Technology Commercialization operates one of the most comprehensive technology transfer programs among leading research universities in the U.S.

Services provided by this office support the economic development initiatives of Purdue University and benefit the university's academic activities through commercializing, licensing and protecting Purdue intellectual property.

The Purdue Research Foundation is a private, nonprofit foundation created to advance the mission of Purdue University.

IU says state's funding formula poses problems

By MICHAEL RESCHKE
(Bloomington) Herald-Times

Despite being Indiana University's highest performing campus, Bloomington will receive less money from state operating appropriations in fiscal year 2020 than the previous year. That's because the state's performance-based funding formula puts a high priority on growth.

"We're being punished by our own success in some regards," said Chuck Carney, IU spokesman.

Indiana's Performance Funding Formula was started in 2003 to provide incentives to public higher education institutions that improve in specific metrics.

The formula has evolved since, and IU leaders say it's time for another change. The state's higher education commissioner said the formula is continually evaluated, but the current incarnation allows all campuses an opportunity to be rewarded.

As it exists now, state operating support for public colleges and universities is composed of two main categories: base funding and performance funding. Base funding is what each campus' state allocation was the previous year.

Bloomington has more students than any other IU campus.

"To change significantly, it would take whole lot of students to graduate in four years," Carney said.

Charlie Ricketts named Courier 10K Starter

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

This year marks the 41st year that The Madison Courier has put on its annual Firecracker 10K Walk/Run and Charlie Ricketts has been there for nearly every one. The Madison native, Shawe High School and avid runner, Ricketts has competed in marathons in Chicago and in Boston but he never misses his hometown race.

It is because of that dedication that Ricketts will serve as the Official Firecracker 10K Starter for the second time. Now 78 years old, Ricketts has slowed down a bit but he still makes sure to get in his daily run and he doesn't plan on missing the race any time soon.

"Over the years you get to know several people that are running the race and you kind of establish some camaraderie there," Ricketts said on why he comes back every year. "You see them daily or weekly around town and you kibitz a little bit about the race and if they're still going to run it and we kind of egg each other on a bit. It's kind of a tradition."

Ricketts was first honored as the official starter in 2010 as a reward for a lifetime of support in the event. It's the same reason he was chosen this year.

"They must be running out of names," Ricketts joked.

Ricketts took up running while a student at Shawe almost against his own choice. Pushed into running as part of basketball conditioning, Ricketts fell in love with the sport and it turned into a passion.

"I was never all that great, but I was persistent," Ricketts said.

Along the way he competed in the Chicago Marathon in 2001 and 2002 and got his chance at the "big race," the Boston Marathon in 2004. In both cases, it was a chance to cross something off his bucket list.

"I kind of got away from (running) until my son was in his middle teens and he took up running just for exercise and I started running with him," Ricketts said. "I guess I've been running for 35 or 40 years now."

The course Ricketts and the rest of the runners will compete on this year will be far different from one they have run in the past. Construction on Hanging Rock Hill (Cragmont Street/SR 7) has forced race organizers to keep the race completely on the hilltop this year. After starting at Madison

Young Niners no match for veteran Floyd

By ROB LAFARY

A young and inexperienced Madison Post 9 squad committed seven errors and faced an uphill battle against an experienced and talented team as Floyds Knobs Post 42 picked up a decisive 23-3 victory in Legion baseball action at Gary O'Neal Field on Thursday night.

Post 42 tacked on runs from the get-go and never looked back, scoring in four of the seven innings played. But the scoreboard at this point in the young summer season is the least of worries to Madison head coach Tim Armstrong.

"We knew coming in what we were going up against," Armstrong said. "Floyds has the McMahel kid who was an Indiana All-Star here last week and a few other guys who are signed to play at Division 1 schools. It does us no good to play somebody who isn't as good as us. We are going to be alright."

Madison's first error of the night allowed Floyds' leadoff hitter Brady Latham to second base after a single and the offensive assault ensued two batters later when a Jack Ellis sacrifice fly scored Latham. Blayden McMahel and Aiden Minzenberger each singled and scored on a Devan Rivers groundball that was misplayed for an error and a throwing error scored Luke Stock to give Floyds a 4-0 lead.

Post 9 trimmed the deficit to 4-1 after Bailey Elliott scored on a Post 42 error and the score remained the same until the top of the fourth inning when Blake Barrett led off with a towering solo home run to left field. Floyds added five more runs in the frame on four more hits and two Madison errors for a 10-1 advantage before the lead grew even more the rest of the way.

"We had seven errors tonight and only 10 of their runs were earned," Armstrong said. "So take errors away and it's a 10-3 game by the end of the night. We can live with that. But we don't have the power pitching or the power hitting right now that Floyds brings at you. But we can't make routine miscues and that's what we are working on. We are here to get better."

Floyds added three more runs in the top of the fifth including a two-

Fans elect historically young NL lineup

By JAKE SEINER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Surrounded by sweet-swinging sluggers Christian Yelich, Cody Bellinger and Ronald Acuna Jr., All-Star stalwart Nolan Arenado is set for a new role with the National League — elder statesman.

"It shows how good these young guys are," Arenado said.

The five-time All-Star will be joined by a bumper crop of talent in one of the youngest All-Star Game lineups ever — a millennial-heavy NL group that could make history at the midsummer showcase in Cleveland on July 9.

Major League Baseball revealed the results from fan balloting for its All-Star starters Thursday, and the average age of the eight NL starters is 25.8 years old. Depending on who is chosen as the club's designated hitter, the starting position players could be the youngest ever, surpassing the 1967 NL and 2017 AL clubs, which averaged 26.0 years old.

"I've never seen this much young talent in the game," said Dodgers manager Dave Roberts, who will lead the NL. "There's a lot of fun players to watch — talented and the personalities from some of these young players."

Angels star Mike Trout was the leading vote getter in the final round. He'll be joined on the AL squad by three Astros — Alex Bregman, George Springer and Michael Brantley — and two Yankees — Gary Sanchez and DJ LeMahieu.

The lineups are full of unlikely names. LeMahieu didn't crack New York's opening day lineup. Rangers designated hitter Hunter Pence could only find a minor league contract as a free agent last offseason. Diamondbacks second baseman Ketel Marte and Twins shortstop Jorge Polanco hardly garnered All-Star attention in previous years. Now they're All-Star starters.

"It was quite a wild journey from this year to last year," Pence said. "And to even be speaking about this now, is a miracle. It's a blessing, and I'm very grateful."

The NL's oldest elected starters are 29-year-old Freddie Freeman from Atlanta and 28-year-old Arenado of Colorado.

"Some of these young players are unbelievable players," Arenado said. "We're fortunate to be in this time, when you get to see how good they are."

Indians first baseman Carlos Santana was elected to start in his home park in the 33-year-old's first All-Star selection. He'll be joined in the lineup by Brantley, a former teammate who left the Indians in free agency last offseason for a $32 million, two-year deal with Houston. Brantley edged Yankees slugger Aaron Judge by 0.9% for the final outfield spot.

The Cubs' Willson Contreras and Javier Baez will each start for the NL for the second straight year. Baez was elected at shortstop a year after starting at second. Only three other All-Stars have started in consecutive years at different positions.

Trout is set to be the sixth AL player to start six times before turning 28. The others are Joe DiMaggio, Mickey Mantle, Ivan Rodriguez, Rod Carew and Ken Griffey Jr. It's Trout's eighth straight selection overall.

"I just enjoy going to them," he said. "Every year it seems like I am slowing it down and embracing the experience. The first couple I was running around and it went so fast."

Yelich was second in voting behind Trout. He homered in last year's All-Star Game, then staged a second-half tear that ended in him winning NL

Miss M to run 2nd boat, Tate to defend Gold Cup

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

It was day with a plenty of good news for Unlimited hydroplane race fans as the Miss Madison and sponsor "Oh Boy! Oberto" announced that they are once again joining forces and Andrew Tate and the U-1 Jones Racing Team have announced that they are coming to Madison.

For updates on the H1 season opener at Guntersville, follow David Campbell (@CampbellSports) on Twitter and check out madisoncourier.com

The Oberto news broke first on Thursday afternoon. Larry Oberto, son of longtime company president and spokesman Art Oberto, told Hydro News of his plans to sponsor the Miss Madison Racing Team's backup boat, which last ran a year ago as the Miss HomeStreet. The 2007-vintage boat ran as the Oh Boy! Oberto from 2007 through 2015 and won six National High Points championships with Steve David and Jimmy Shane at the wheel. Shane won an additional two championships in the craft with HomeStreet Bank as the sponsor.

Shane drove the 2007 boat to victory at Madison a year ago but the team opted to go with its newer boat starting with the Seattle race.

Since Oberto and Miss Madison parted ways after the 2015 season, Oberto has sponsored several boats in the Washington state races. Last season, Oberto hooked up with the Alabama-based Wiggins Racing Team for two races, but that boat was virtually destroyed in a wreck in Seattle.

Wiggins is spending this season building a new boat and Larry Oberto decided to reunite with the Miss Madison team. The boat will run as the U-1918 Oh Boy! Oberto with veteran driver Jeff Bernard at the wheel.

The Oberto deal is for the Tri-Cities, Seattle and San Diego races. The 2007 boat will not race this weekend in the H1 Unlimited season opener at Guntersville and there is no word on whether it will race in Madison.

While the second Miss Madison may not show up for its home town race, the defending National High Points and APBA Gold Cup Champion Andrew Tate and the U-1 Jones Racing confirmed on Thursday that it will in town next weekend.

The team made the announcement through its Twitter page late Thursday evening. After missing this weekend's race in Guntersville due to a scheduling conflict, the team is packing for Madison and will be on hand to defend its title.

"U-1 Jones Racing is happy to announce we are preparing to leave for and race in Madison, Indiana. We're sorry circumstances did not allow us to race in Guntersville but we will be watching the excitement on live video streams!" the team said.

The announcement of the Jones' Racing participation brings the number of confirmed H1 Unlimited teams at Madison to seven. It is unlikely any other teams will compete in the race.

Thurston allows 3R

COURIER STAFF REPORT

Madison's Ryan Thurston allowed one earned run in a short stint in the Gary SouthShore Railcats' 7-3 win at the Milwaukee Milkmen in an American Association contest on Wednesday.

Thurston entered the game in the eighth inning with Gary ahead 7-0. The left-hander was tagged with three runs on four hits in two-thirds of an inning, but an error made only one of those runs his fault. He also walked a batter without a strikeout.

In 15 and a third innings pitched this season, Thurston has allowed eight runs — six earned — on 14 hits with 13 strikeouts and eight walks. He has a 2.95 ERA without a win or a loss.

Altidore scores in 1st start in 20 months

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Jozy Altidore made an impression in first return to the United States' starting lineup.

Altidore scored on an overhead kick in his first start for the national team in 20 months, lifting the U.S. over Panama 1-0 Wednesday night as the Americans finished first in their CONCACAF Gold Cup group.

Altidore got the goal from 2 yards following a corner kick in the 66th minute that was redirected by Matt Miazga. Coming back from a hamstring injury that slowed him at the start of training camp, the 29-year-old Altidore scored his 42nd goal in 113 international appearances.

After the match, he walked by reporters and did not stop to respond to questions.

The defending champion United States went 3-0 in group play and outscored opponents 11-0. The 30th-ranked Americans play No. 79 Curacao in the quarterfinals at Philadelphia on Sunday, and the winner faces Jamaica or Panama in the semifinals.

"This is a team we can't take lightly," U.S. coach Gregg Berhalter said. "We're going to go in fully prepared. They have talent. They can score goals."

The plus-11 goal difference was the best in the Gold Cup for the Americans, topping plus-nine in 2013. The Americans did not allow a goal in a three-match group stage for the second time, the first since 2007, and improved to 36 wins, one loss and four draws in the Gold Cup group stage.

"I talked to Jozy at halftime and asked how much more he had in him," Berhalter explained. "He said, 'I want to stay on the field.' When you hear that from a player, it makes you feel great. When that player goes out and scores the winning goal, it makes you feel even better."

Both teams already had clinched quarterfinal berths. Berhalter changed all 11 starters and Panama nine. Altidore had not started since the loss at Trinidad and Tobago on Oct. 10, 2017, that ended the Americans' streak of seven straight World Cup appearances.

Defender Omar Gonzalez captained the U.S. for the first time. Goalkeeper Sean Johnson made his second competitive appearance, his first since a Gold Cup match against Costa Rica in July 2013.

The U.S. had nearly two-thirds possession, and pressure increased after Christian Pulisic entered in the 65th minute.

"We had a game plan going into it," midfielder Christian Roldan said. "We kept the shutout. We kept them to one shot and zero corners. We're pretty happy with the effort defensively. In the end, you grind out these games and win the group."

Lakers trading 3 to clear cap space

By TIM REYNOLDS
AP Basketball Writer

The Los Angeles Lakers' price tag for Anthony Davis got a little steeper on Thursday, with the tradeoff being that the team now has the flexibility to bring another max-contract star to play alongside him and LeBron James next season.

A person with knowledge of the negotiations told The Associated Press that the Lakers will send Moritz Wagner, Issac Bonga, Jemerrio Jones and a future second-round pick to the Washington Wizards as part of the deal that will bring Davis to Los Angeles. The Wizards will send cash to the New Orleans Pelicans in the deal, said the person who spoke to the AP on condition of anonymity because the agreement cannot be finalized until July 6.

The trade was first reported by ESPN, and the cash element was first reported by The Washington Post.

Shedding those contracts — along with Davis waiving his $4 million trade kicker, as ESPN reported — will give the Lakers enough cap space to sign a max player, if they are so inclined.

They could also spread that cap space out among multiple players, which could be the more prudent move considering the Lakers have virtually an entire roster to fill. Once this trade is executed, the Lakers will have only James, Davis and Kyle Kuzma under contract for next season, not counting a pair of restricted free agents.

The Lakers agreed earlier this month to acquire Davis from New Orleans for Lonzo Ball, Josh Hart, Brandon Ingram and three first-round draft picks — one of them being De'Andre Hunter, who was chosen by the Lakers on draft night and will then be traded to New Orleans and flipped from there to the Atlanta Hawks.

Thursday's agreement means six players and four picks were the price the Lakers paid for Davis. It technically is not a 10-for-1 move, because the newfound cap space will bring at least one other player to Los Angeles.

Wagner, Jones and Bonga were rookies last season. Wagner averaged 4.8 points in 43 games, Jones scored a total of 27 points in six games and Bonga scored 19 points in 22 appearances with the Lakers.

National champion Vanderbilt set to continue its baseball roll in 2020

By ERIC OLSON
AP Sports Writer

OMAHA, Neb. — Vanderbilt topped off its dominant run through the Southeastern Conference with the national championship, and there may be no slowing down the Commodores.

Tim Corbin's 2020 club, on paper, might even be better.

"Tim has built a program that is to the point it just recycles guys," ESPN college baseball analyst Kyle Peterson said Thursday. "He's proven it for 10 years now. They're not light on talent."

A lot of the talent on the team that won an SEC-record 59 games was young.

Freshman Kumar Rocker was the nation's most dominant pitcher the second half of the season, threw a no-hitter in super regionals and was voted Most Outstanding Player in the College World Series. He will be around two more years and looks destined to be the No. 1 pick of the 2021 Major League Baseball draft.

"I'm glad that the college game has players like that in it," said Michigan coach Erik Bakich, whose team was all but shut down by Rocker in Game 2 of the CWS finals. "The college game is better when guys like that come to school."

Vandy's pitching staff also brings back starter Mason Hickman, the winner in Game 3 of the finals, as well as relievers Jake Eder, Tyler Brown, Ethan Smith and Hugh Fisher.

Jack Leiter, son of former major leaguer Al Leiter, would have been a first-round pick coming out of high school this year but, like Rocker a year ago, told MLB teams he was committed to going to school to pitch. He is the top Vanderbilt signee in a recruiting class ranked No. 1 by Perfect Game.

The biggest departure will be right fielder JJ Bleday, the SEC player of the year who hit a nation-leading 27 of the Commodores' 100 home runs. He was the No. 4 overall draft pick by the Miami Marlins.

As many as five everyday players could be back, led by third baseman Austin Martin, a .400 hitter coming into the CWS who finished at .392. Martin already is projected to be a top-five draft pick next year. Catcher Philip Clarke was a draft-eligible sophomore taken in the ninth round by the Toronto Blue Jays, but chances are good he will return. The estimated value of Clarke's draft slot is $154,900.

"He's a top two round guy," Peterson said. "They could throw a bunch of money at him. But it's hard to sign draft-eligible sophomores out of a place like Vanderbilt unless you pay him more than you would pay at that draft spot. He's got a year of leverage left."

Sophomore center fielder Pat DeMarco (17th round, Yankees) and junior catcher-designated hitter Ty Duvall (25th round, Athletics) also have decisions to make.

Shortstop Ethan Paul would tell them that he other seniors who returned after getting drafted last year had no regrets.

"Our No. 1 reason to come back to school wasn't to have this outlandish season or anything like that," Paul said. "I think that we all wanted to just be a part of something special. It's great to win a national championship, it's great to do all those things, but the program means so much more to us than just winning.

"There's such a bond with each other and we do all those things off the field and we celebrate each other so well. I'm happy that we were able to have this moment, and it's going to be a memory forever, but just being able to share this team and this experience with these guys, I mean, friends for life."

For all the talent Corbin has returning, Rocker will be the star attraction. The 6-foot-4, 255-pounder from Georgia won 10 of his last 11 starts, struck out 19 while throwing that no-hitter against Duke, and fanned 17 and allowed two earned runs in 12 1/3 innings against Mississippi State and Michigan at the CWS.

"He's got a fiber of competition that's different," Corbin said. "He loves the arena of competition, and when you see guys like that, they separate themselves. Handing him the ball, I didn't feel at any time that that was above him. I felt like that was for him. That's something he wanted. That's something that he could do. He pitches for Vanderbilt. He loves to pitch for his team, and it's pure, and it's raw, and it's not manufactured."

MVP. He's been just as good in 2019, leading the majors with 29 homers while hitting .332 with a 1.149 OPS.

"In spring, there were a lot of questions if I could do it again," Yelich said. "Was it a fluke? Am I a good player? That stuff kind of lights a fire in me.

"I didn't know how the year was going to go, but I wasn't going to look back on last year and think anything was guaranteed. Just because you're an MVP the previous year, you're not going to just walk through the next year and everything was going to be fine."

The league adopted a new balloting structure this season, which operated exclusively through Google. Fans voted up until June 21 to determine finalists for All-Star starters. The top three vote getters at each position — top nine in the outfield — in each league then entered a second phase of voting, which ran Wednesday and Thursday. Vote totals were reset prior to the final round.

Fans elected the nine starting players for the AL team and eight for the NL — with the extra AL player being the designated hitter. The rest of the 32-man rosters for each league, including the DH for the National League, will be determined by player balloting and selections from the Commissioner's Office. Those All-Stars will be announced Sunday.

High School, runners and walkers will go around Madison Junior High School to Wilson Avenue, then to the Madison State Hospital grounds. Participants will then run a complete loop through the state hospital grounds — instead of heading down Hanging Rock to Third Street and ending at Lytle Park as in previous years.

After the loop through the state hospital grounds, runners and walkers will head back to Wilson Avenue and finish on the high school track.

While Ricketts understands why the change was made, he said he will miss the old course.

"I loved going down that hill. A lot of people didn't, but that's when I had a chance to pass some people," Ricketts said. "I used to live by the state hospital and I've run there plenty of times. It's a beautiful area and it will make for a good race."

This year's 41st annual 10K will begin at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, July 6, which is 15 minutes later than normal. Check-in will begin at 6:30 a.m. at MCHS.

"I know that some participants want an earlier start, but we have to coordinate with a shift change at the state hospital grounds, and the 15-minute difference is critical to making sure we do not have traffic on the course," Madison Courier Publisher Curt Jacobs said.

Registration and restroom facilities will be at the high school track.

Walkers' registration is $20 and runners' registration is $30. Those planning to participate are encouraged to register early to secure their desired T-shirt size.

Registration forms are available at the Madison Courier office, 310 West Street, and MadisonCourier.com/10K.

RBI double by McMahel and put up eight runs in the top of the sixth inning that saw Post 42 with four more hits including a two-run home run by Rivers.

Madison scored a run in the bottom of the sixth when a Gabe True grounder was bobbled in the field, plating Quentin Humes before Floyds added two more runs in the top of the seventh. Craig Demaree led off the bottom of the seventh with a double and scored on a bases loaded walk issued to Quentin Ferris but Post 9's double-digit deficit was far too much to overcome and Post 42 secured a seven-inning win with the 10-run rule in effect.

"I told the guys after the game not to worry about what the scoreboard says ... we are here to get better," Armstrong said. "We just saw what big-time baseball looks like. Our guys aren't used to that yet. I'm pleased that we are out here putting in the work. We had four incoming freshmen in the lineup tonight. Nights like tonight will make us better in the long run."

Floyds bashed 13 hits in the game including three each by McMahel and Minzenberger and two each from Latham, Rivers and Joe Harrington. McMahel finished with a team-high five RBIs and Minzenberger drove in three runs and scored three times.

Madison was led by Craig Demaree with a double, a single and a run scored.

Sam Gasper started on the mound for Post 42 and picked up the win. Gasper threw four innings and allowed an unearned run on two hits while striking out one and walking two.

Bailey Elliott was dealt the loss after starting for Madison. Elliott threw four innings and allowed 10 runs — six earned — on nine hits while striking out three and walking two.

Children at Jefferson County Library create stuffed animals

The Jefferson County Public Library in Hanover hosted a children's event in which participants made stuffed animals and received a free book from the library. The stuffed animals —puppies — were made by Noah's Ark Mobile Animal Workshop. Participants each stuffed and completed a stuffed puppy. Before finishing the puppies, the children also received a small fabric star to put with the stuffing before the puppies were stitched. For more events from the Jefferson County Public Library, go to www.mjcpl.org or call the library at (812) 265-2744. (Courier staff photos by Connor Jacobs)

Historic Vevay gas station now a coloring book page

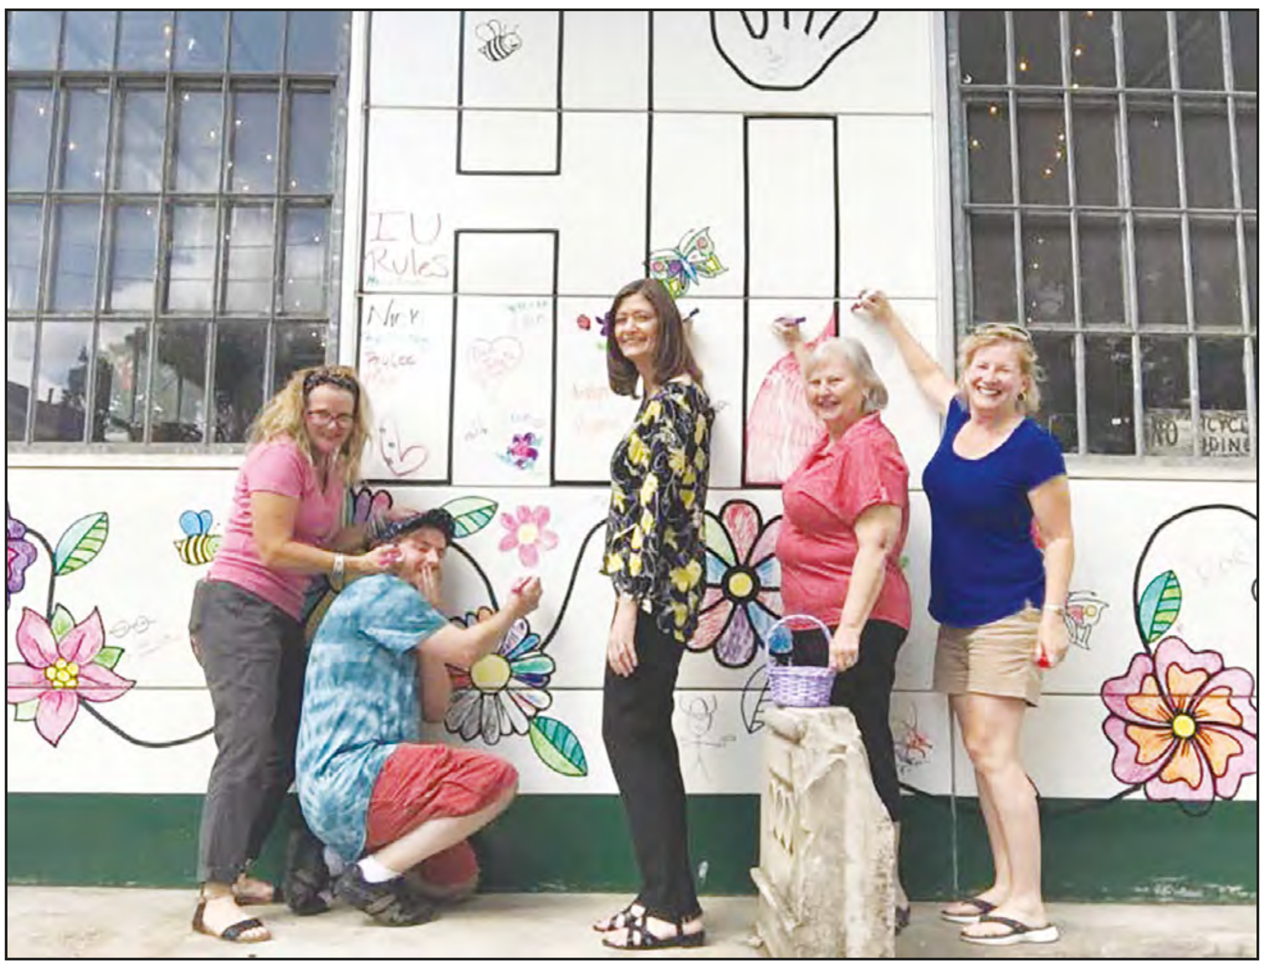
Courier staff report

A Switzerland County arts group has partnered with businesses and private partnerships to create a giant dry erase coloring book page on a historic Lustron gas station in Vevay.

The Community Art Center of Switzerland County, The Community Foundation of Switzerland County and various other businesses and private partnerships worked together to launch a giant interactive coloring book mural as a great way to bring public art to all ages while allowing interaction with the mural. The mural itself encompasses an entire wall of an old Texaco gas station, which now houses an antique and vintage shop, Vevay Vintage Prop & Shop.

The building, owned by Lisa and Jerry Fisher of Fisher Real Estate, is made entirely of porcelain enamel metal-coated panels, which creates the opportunity for a large "dry erase" canvas. Built in the late 1930s to early 1940s, the property was leased to Angie and Jeff Priest of Priest Enterprises to open a retail store featuring antiques and vintage items for sale or rent.

The project gained backing and encouragement when the idea was told to local artist and business owners Karin Dutkiewicz of ProjeKtWorks and Rose Leap of Creative Images. With the support of the Community Art Center of Switzerland County, a grant was written to The Community Foundation of Switzerland County to help cover some of the cost of the mural, while the rest was donated with in-kind and monetary donations.



Once created, the mural was named the Giant Interactive Coloring Book Mural. Its purpose — engage the public, both local and tourists, in a public interactive art project — created a space of artistic expression across all ages, backgrounds and geographies without the need for specialized art training or talent.

The mural has a "welcome" theme with a giant hand waving, but will continue to change and rearrange in keeping with community events and seasons. The second theme will celebrate the Swiss Wine Festival, which occurs each August and the third theme will focus on the Fall and the Annual Sleepy Hollow celebration. Each new mural will start with a clean wall so everyone can create something new with each version of the mural.

"We are excited to be able to participate in this partnership," said Pam Acton, executive director of The Community Foundation of Switzerland County. "We are always looking for creative project ideas in the community and this interactive art project was a perfect fit. It will enable all kinds of people to come together to provide such a unique art project in our community."

"We are pleased to partner with Vevay Vintage Prop & Shop for the first private/public funded art project promoting the arts and community involvement within Vevay, Indiana," said Tim Schackleford, president of The Community Art Center of Switzerland County board. "We felt that not only would this be a fun project to be a part of and fall within our mission, but that it would also promote future opportunities for other community projects in the future."

For more information about the Giant Interative Coloring Book Mural, email Angie Priest at angiefaypriest@gmail.com

Art competition winner gets D.C. trip, meets Rep. Pence

Courier staff report

U.S. Representative Greg Pence welcomed Greensburg Community High School senior Molly Brandes and her mother, Jessica, to Washington earlier this week in celebration of Brandes' winning entry for the 2019 Congressional Art Competition.

"It was great to meet Molly and her mother, Jessica," Pence said. "We love to showcase the incredible talent of our constituents whenever and wherever we can, and Molly's artistic touch is no exception."

Brandes, who is entering her senior year of high school, said she was excited to be in Washington.

"It's awesome to be in Washington D.C. for this competition, especially since I get to enjoy the experience with my mother," Brandes said. "I cannot believe my art will be hanging in the U.S. Capitol Building. Thank you to Congressman Pence and his staff for hosting us."

Brandes is the daughter of Jessica and Jason Weldishofer. Brandes said she enjoys painting, but does not know if she will make it a full-time career and is planning to study something medical-related after high school.

Pence also recognized Greensburg Community High School Art Teacher Dustin Smith for encouraging his students to take part in this annual competition.

"It's great that teachers like Mr. Smith encourage his students to put themselves out there in a competitive setting," Pence said. "It also provides his students with opportunities like the one Molly is experiencing this week in D.C."

Each spring, the Congressional Institute sponsors a nationwide high school art competition to recognize and encourage artistic talent in each congressional district throughout the nation. Since the competition's beginning in 1982, more than 650,000 high school students have participated.

Winners are recognized both in their district and at an annual awards ceremony in Washington, which took place Monday, June 24. The winning works are displayed for one year at the U.S. Capitol.

Anita Brookner, who was an English author and art historian, wrote, "In real life ... it is the hare who wins. Every time. Look around you. And in any case it is my contention that Aesop was writing for the tortoise market. ... Hares have no time to read. They are too busy winning the game."

Not every time! Look at today's deal. What happens in three no-trump after West leads the spade queen?

In the bidding, North might have upgraded and opened two no-trump. His hand passed my first test, in that it had seven ace-king points, counting two for an ace and one for a king. But the worthless doubleton and low spot-card count were minuses. South did not like to respond one no-trump, but there was nothing else he could do.

South started with seven top tricks: two spades, three hearts and two diamonds. Maybe hearts were 3-3, but declarer still needed a club trick or two. So, after winning trick one, he played a club to his jack. The hare sitting West took the trick with his queen and persevered with a second spade. South won that too and led a second club. West collected his ace and two spades, but declarer claimed the remainder. He had the heart ace as a hand entry to his club winners.

If West had acted like a tortoise, being slow and thoughtful, he would have realized that South was marked with club length, because he had denied both a four-card major and diamond support in the auction. A tortoise would have let South win trick two with his club jack. Then declarer would have had to go down one.

Friend being insecure may create conflict, ruin friendshi

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I have a friend who I have known for many years, and suddenly I have noticed that she is getting possessive with me. She just wants to see me alone, and she questions whether or not I’m seeing other friends when I can’t see her at a certain time. She makes comments about how popular I am and makes sarcastic comments about friends liking me better.

I know she is insecure, but this subject is difficult to approach with her.

She says that’s the way she is, and that’s that. She has friends but seems to depend on me a lot. I’m at my wit’s end. How should I handle this? — Torn and Frustrated

Dear Torn and Frustrated: A friend is someone who wishes you well — someone who wants to see you grow and is there for you during the good times and bad. The “friend” described in your letter is missing those qualities. In fact, she sounds like someone who does not want to see you shine or to be popular, so she can keep you all to herself.

She is obviously very insecure. But the real question is whether you should allow her insecurity and jealousy to weigh you down. Have a forthright conversation with her about how you feel. Tell her in no uncertain terms that you are allowed to have other friends besides her, though that doesn’t mean that you like her any less. In fact, you will probably like and respect her more as a friend if she gives you freedom.

It does sound like you care about her, so remember to come from a place of love and compassion when you approach her. If she becomes defensive, perhaps now is the time to give her space. Instead, tell her that when she is ready to not be so possessive and jealous, you will be ready to be her friend.

Dear Readers: A great number of you wrote in about the possibility of a medical condition, particularly sleep apnea, as a reason for intense snoring. Below are some of those letters, which I found interesting and educational.

Dear Annie: I am responding to “Restless Nights,” regarding her mom’s snoring. I, too, snored very loudly, and my family made many remarks about it. I had a sleep study done and have been diagnosed with sleep apnea. I now use a CPAP machine, and I no longer snore. I also didn’t realize how little sleep I was getting before I got my machine. “Restless Nights” should encourage her mom to talk to her doctor to see if she needs to have a sleep study done. It’s the best thing I’ve ever done for myself. — No More Restless Nights

Dear Annie: Believe me, a snoring roommate can put a real crimp in a vacation. Years ago, a former vacation roommate wrote to tell me she’d discovered she had sleep apnea. She apologized for not knowing how disruptive her snoring was to others. Treatment was important for her because apnea can harm physical health.

When I was young, I did not have sleep apnea. However, a few years ago I was having sleep issues and was diagnosed with sleep apnea. The newest CPAP machines that are used to treat sleep apnea are so quiet that peaceful sleep is possible for all who share a bedroom. — Peaceful Sleeper

Dear Annie: I read your response to “Restless Nights” and totally agree with your advice regarding the writer’s guilt issues. I was surprised, however, that you failed to mention the strong possibility that the mom’s snoring could be related to sleep apnea, which, in some cases, can have serious side effects. Given the apparent severity of her symptoms, I would, as a retired physician, strongly recommend that she have this investigated. — A Medical Doctor

Madison Courier 10K Run/Walk

8:15 a.m.
from Madison Consolidated High School to Lytle Park

Now in its 41st year, The Madison Courier 10K Run and Walk annually draws hundreds of runners and walkers — and many more spectators. The traditional scenic 6.2-mile road course that has taken participants from Madison's hilltop to the downtown area in the past will not be in play this year due to ongoing roadwork on Hanging Rock Hill. This year's course begins and ends at Madison Consolidated High School so the winner will set the record for that course.

Former champ Jeremy Johnson, 24, of Austin, broke defending champ Kris Sandlin's bid for a record fifth win in the event last year with a time of 31:01 while Switzerland County's standout distance runner, Leah Anders, 17, of Rising Sun, won her second women's title in three years with a time of 41:33.

Entry forms are available at The Madison Courier, located at 310 West St. in downtown Madison and online at www.madisoncourier.com. Race day check-in is at Madison Consolidated High School's Cub Field beginning at 6:30 a.m. on race day. Registration is also available on race day until 8 a.m.

2018 Courier 10K winner Jeremy Johnson of Austin (left)

Entry fee is $30 for the run and $25 for the walk. Participants will receive a commemorative T-shirt and a packet. Top three finishers in each of the eight male and eight female age divisions in the run will receive awards. The walk is a non-competitive event and no awards are presented.

FatBoyz BodyWorkz Cornhole Tournament

Noon Registration
at Fireman's Park

Cost: $5 entry fee plus a Madison Regatta admission wristband.

The popular cornhole bean bag game is elevated to tournament status with cash prizes on the line. Blind draw registration begins at noon with tournament starting at 1 p.m. First prize is $300, second $200 and third $100.

Roostertail Music Festival presented by Belterra

1 p.m. to Midnight
Bicentennial Park

Admission: A $25 Roostertail Music Festival wristband or a $40 All Access wristband good for both the music festival and Madison Regatta hydroplane races.

Day Two of the expanded Madison Regatta Music Festival begins with Brent Mathis and continues with 16 Bones, Edgar Red, Justin Wells, American Aquarium, Brent Cobb and the headline national touring act, Whiskey Myers, who opened for The Rolling Stones this past week.

Chandler Chevrolet Driver's Autograph Session

2:15-3:15 p.m

Come meet all of the H1 Unlimited, Grand Prix World and Vintage hydroplane drivers for a free autograph session.

American Legion Post 9, Commonwealth Engineers, River Rats Rodz & City of Madison Fireworks Extravaganza

Approximately 10 p.m.
Madison Riverfront

Admission: Free after 4:30 p.m.

Madison lights up the sky over the Ohio River with loud, colorful fireworks based on a patriotic program that celebrates the Regatta and America's independence.

Admission is free and open to the public and the event is rain or shine. The area from West Street to Broadway will be restricted to patrons with a Roosertail Music Festival wristband (A $25 music festival wristband or $40 All-Access wristband good for both the music festival and boat races) but fireworks spectators should be able to hear the music coming from nearby Bicentennial Park.

Sunday, July 8

APBA Gold Cup and Indiana Governor's Cup Madison Regatta

Admission: A $25 two-day Madison Regatta race wristband or a $40 two-day All-Access wristband good for admission to the boat races and music festival.

Testing for the H1 Unlimited and Grand Prix World Supercharged race program will begin on Friday, July 5 with the first sets of heat racing Saturday. The final heats for both series are Sunday. See a complete race weekend schedule on Page 28 of this special section.

Journeyman Gibson has hooped through Europe

Former Madison Cub player to be grand marshal of Regatta Parade

By ROB LAFARY
Courier Staff Writer
sports@madisoncourier.com

Madison basketball player Danny Gibson as a high school senior in 2001-02 (right) and picking up Most Valuable Player honors (above) after leading Lukoil Academic Sofia to the Bulgarian Basketball League championship in 2017. Gibson, 35, has played professional basketball all across Europe since graduating from University of Southern Indiana in 2006.

Danny Gibson's path to professional basketball has meant spending the majority of his time overseas in Europe but the Madison native has never forgotten his hometown nor countless memories of attending the Madison Regatta.

So when Gibson received the call just a couple of weeks ago to be the grand marshal of Friday's Madison Regatta parade, accepting the invitation was humbling.

"I'm just honored," Gibson said on the invitation. "There were a lot of years as a kid where I attended the parade and I remember always seeing so many different celebrities who were the grand marshal. When I was in high school Jared Jeffries, who went on to a great career at IU and in the NBA, was the grand marshal and I saw him in town and thought it was pretty cool. So to follow in the footsteps of so many greats and get to be the grand marshal is a big deal to me."

Gibson, a former Madison basketball standout who graduated in 2002, played two years of college basketball at Olney Central College before moving on to two years as a starter at the University of Southern Indiana. He then embarked on a 13-year career as a professional basketball player in the international ranks. His career has taken him throughout Europe including stops in Germany, Bulgaria, Poland, Greece and the Netherlands.

Most recently, Gibson finished his 13th year of professional basketball in Turkey where he played for Buyukcekmece, a Turkish club based in Istanbul. The 35-year-old averaged just under 10 points per game including a 90 percent clip at the free-throw line.

"Obviously, at the time when I signed to play overseas in 2006, it was a small opportunity that I've been able to make the most of," Gibson said. "It has been a journey of perseverance and continuing to learn how to play the game but I've enjoyed every second of it. No matter if it has been Turkey or anywhere else I've played, I've seen a ton of talent and played against it."

Gibson's career has earned plenty of accolades throughout Europe where he has established himself as a seasoned veteran and well-respected player all across the continent.

He was a national champion in Poland, having captured the Polish Basketball Cup in 2014 with Slask Wroclaw, and his individual accomplishments have racked up awards for more than a decade. He was MVP of the Dutch Basketball League in 2010, the same year he was a member of the All-DBL Team and DBL All-Star team. In 2016, he was an All-Polish Basketball League selection at point guard and was the Finals MVP of the NBL League in Bulgaria after capturing that league championship.

"I didn't know what to expect when I started playing in Europe but it has been about learning from the culture, learning the game and fitting into both," Gibson said. "It's a continent that is just so passionate about the game and they don't skip any steps in teaching it. In turn, I've played against some amazing competition including a couple guys who have went on to all-star careers in the NBA. I played Giannis Antetokoumpo of the Milwaukee Bucks when he was just 15 years old and played Dennis Schroeder, who has become one of the best guards in the league playing for the Atlanta Hawks. It's just been an unbelievable ride."

But even while playing in the pros and against future NBA talent, Gibson is quick to point out that he never forgets his roots and where his basketball career began.

Like many other local athletes, the journey for him started in downtown Madison at the Lide White Boys and Girls Club under the tutelage of two great mentors.

"The Boys and Girls Club played a role in shaping not just the player I am but the man I am," Gibson said. "Ray Black and Burton Chambers both have been such an influence on both me and my career. There's a lot of good memories of going down there and playing ball. I think several in the community can say that building played a huge role in their lives."

From there, Gibson's career path traveled to the top of the hill where he played basketball for the Madison Cubs at Salm Gym — something he still holds as fondly in his heart as anything he's accomplished as a professional in Europe.

"I'll tell you right now, nothing compares to playing on those Friday nights in the winter," Gibson said of Indiana high school basketball. "I've played in big cities and big gyms but there's just nothing like Friday night and putting on that Madison jersey. Turkey Shootouts, beating Southwestern my senior year in it, all those big conference games, there's just nothing that will ever replace that. Those were amazing times."

Gibson's appearance in the Madison Regatta parade marks the first time the Madison native has made it home for the festival in a couple of years. He tries to get home as much as he can — especially when the first weekend of July rolls around and so many Madisonians get the urge to be back home in Indiana for Regatta Week.

The Regatta is an event strongly connected to Gibson's childhood memories and friends and a place where he feels an instant connection to family.

"My grandpa lived for the Regatta," Gibson noted. "He loved hydroplane racing and was down there each year on the river so being in attendance makes me think a lot of him. Plus there's a lot of childhood memories of being at the festival. Every summer I looked forward to the racing and being down there with family and friends. I tell people all the time how unique Madison and this festival is."

The Madison Regatta parade will follow a path on Main Street beginning at 7 p.m. on Friday.

Courier 10K adjusts route during road improvements on Hanging Rock Hill

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier Sports Editor
mcampbell@madisoncourier.com

After four decades with thousands of runners and walkers covering 248 miles — all at a rate of 6.2 miles per year — there are few Madison Regatta Week events more traditional than the Madison Courier Firecracker 10K Run and Walk.

But some of that tradition will take a break at least for this year.

Relax, the annual Regatta Weekend road race is a still on but the traditional course — including the hair-raising sprint down Hanging Rock Hill and the steady climb up Third Street to the finish line at Lytle Park in downtown Madison — will give way to highway department orange cones and barriers that spring forth throughout Indiana every summer.

Destination detour strikes the Courier 10K.

State Road 7 from downtown Madison to the hilltop — also known locally as Hanging Rock Hill — is closed for the summer for roadway improvements and that means Courier 10K organizers had to pick another route for this year's race.

The detour will see the race begin close to its traditional starting point at Madison Consolidated High School, loop around the nearby middle school and travel down Wilson Avenue and into the Madison State Hospital grounds pretty close to other races. But unlike previous years when the course would exit the hospital grounds onto Hanging Rock Hill and head downhill into downtown Madison, this year's race will loop back out of the state hospital and up Wilson Avenue to finish on the running track at Madison's Cub Field.

"We looked at a lot of routes to take the race back downtown so that it could finish at Lytle Park like always but just none of them worked out," Madison Courier Publisher Curt Jacobs said. "The mayor suggested closing Michigan Hill for this year but the mileage just didn't work out and with one of Madison's hills from downtown to the hilltop already closed, we just didn't want to put local people and visitors through all that. We looked at Hatcher Hill and the Heritage Trail but both of them are steep and pretty extreme. There was just not enough time for us to make other routes as safe as we wanted them to be. We had to consider the safety of our runners and walkers. In the end we decided the best option was to finish back at the high school."

The change may not be popular with some runners and walkers — in fact Jacobs has already heard from a few participants — but it's necessary this year and the race will go on. One positive to starting and finishing within yards of each other is that runners and walkers will be close to their vehicles and there will be no need for shuttle buses.

"Participants will start and finish close to their cars so some people may actually like that part of the change," Jacobs noted. "The state hospital grounds are still some of the most scenic parts of the course so we are happy to keep the course there. This is a much flatter course and it will be interesting to see what people think of it. I think participants and spectators will enjoy finishing on the track. We encourage people to come up and sit in the stands and watch the finish. I hope people will send us their feedback."

The 6.2-mile race, now in its 41st annual running, will begin at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, July 6 — 15 minutes later than last year.

"I know that some participants want an earlier start, but we have to coordinate with a shift change at the state hospital grounds, and the 15-minute difference is critical to making sure we do not have traffic on the course," Jacobs said.

Check-in will begin at 6:30 a.m. at Cub Field rather than at Conner K. Salm Gymnasium as in past years. Jacobs said there is plenty of room to handle the arriving runners as well as restrooms and enclosed areas in the event of rain.

The cost is now $25 for walkers and $30 for runners. Awards will be presented to the overall male and female winners as well as to age winners in the run. The walk is non-competitive so no awards will be presented. Those planning to participate are encouraged to register early to secure their appropriate T-shirt size.

Last year's overall winner was Jeremy Johnson, 24, of Austin, with a time of 31:01 while the top female runner was Leah Anders, 17, of Rising Sun, with a time of 41:33.

Registration forms are available at the Madison Courier office, 310 West Street, and Online at MadisonCourier.com/10K . Race-day registration will also be taken until 8 a.m.

Roostertail Music Festival bigger than ever

Friday's headliner Mike and the Moonpies

Madison Regatta's ever-growing explosion of entertainment only gets bigger this year when 16 musical acts descend on Bicentennial Park over a three-day period for the 2019 Roostertail Music Festival presented by Belterra Casino at the Madison Regatta.

Although still in its infancy compared to most weekend music festivals, the Roostertail's third year brings together a blend of local, regional and national acts to span three days for the first time.

Music fans will get a taste of various genres of music while also enjoying the sights and sounds of the Roostertail, which continues to grow in popularity, while some will surely opt to check out the H1 Unlimited Indiana Governor's Cup and APBA Gold Cup hydroplane races.

"Our plan is to always make this festival bigger. The more people that we get coming in, the bigger this festival can be and we've seen that the last couple of years," Roostertail Chairman Brent Turner said. "We continue to listen to those who attended the last two years about what they want to see and we feel like the Roostertail this year shows that and we have really done our best to provide quality entertainment. We've had a good thing going with leaning our concert more towards the country side but we feel like there's a genre and group in our lineup for just about anybody."

Bands known for a blend of country and southern rock will serve as headliners on Friday and Saturday, taking the stage at 10:30 p.m. on each night. Both headliners, along with their opening acts just prior, have made names for themselves around the country inside the music world.

Austin, Texas-based Mike and the Moonpies headlines the event on Friday night, a band that has seen its following grow rapidly since its inception in 2007. Singer-songwriter Mike Harmeier formed the group and has rounded out the five-piece band with steel, bass and electric guitarists to go along with a drummer as the group has become widely popular throughout the midwest, including several past stops in Indiana.

A traditional country band, the group has produced six albums over the last 12 years and five music videos in the last three years. Their most recent, Beaches of Biloxi, premiered in 2018 as part of their latest album Steak Night at the Prairie Rose and the album has proven to be the band's most successful, peaking at No. 22 on the Billboard Heatseekers Album chart. The group was named Best Outlaw Group at the 2019 Ameripolitan Awards.

A former touring partner will open for Mike and the Moonpies at 9 p.m. when country artist Jamie Lin Wilson takes the stage. Much like the headliner, Wilson is an up and comer in the country music industry and has started receiving many accolades for her music. Her single Death & Life was Saving Country Music's 2018 Song of the Year, beating out such artists as the Pistol Annies, Cody Jinks and John Prine.

"We do a lot of online research when it comes to looking for performers," Turner said. "Both Mike and the Moonpies and Jamie Lin Wilson are on the rise in country music. We look a lot at the Saving Country Music website and we read a lot of good things about these two and it's obviously nice to get these acts when they are still up and coming and not as expensive. Their touring dates are starting to pick up and are getting a good following in Indiana."

The Pass, a new wave 80's band, will open the entertainment on Friday night followed by Frederick the Younger, an alternative rock group from Louisville, and hip-hop duo Little Stranger. Turner says the festival will coincide with the Madison Regatta Parade on Main Street, but those in attendance are free to move in and out of Bicentennial Park to attend.

"Obviously we know that there will be some music going on at the same time as the parade so we encourage as many as we can to move in and out so they can attend both. Come before the parade, enjoy some music, then those wanting to watch the parade may do so and then return for more entertainment. We are lucky enough to be in a spot that can accommodate both."

Blending the twang of country with the grit of rock is one of country's most popular young acts in Whiskey Myers, who headlines the entertainment on Saturday night following the widely popular Regatta Fireworks Show. Myers, who formed his Palestine, Texas-based group in 2007, has surged tremendously in the last five years.

Myers' latest album Mud, which debuted in 2016, climbed all the way to No. 1 on the Billboard Country Music Album chart just recently after the band appeared on four episodes of the hit TV show "Yellowstone," featuring Kevin Costner, and their single Stone appeared in the top 10 on the Billboard All Genres chart. The band's 2014

Saturday's headliner Whiskey Myers album Early Morning Shakes rose as high as No. 10.

A week prior to their appearance at the Roostertail Music Festival, Whiskey Myers is scheduled to open for The Rolling Stones at Soldier Field in Chicago.

"We caught this group at the right time because they are skyrocketing towards the top," Turner noted. "Obviously, getting to open for the Stones in front of 70,000 people in Chicago is big-time exposure and getting on 'Yellowstone' has made them very familiar with much of the nation. I think after they appeared on the show, every one of their albums charted at the same time. That's almost unheard of."

Saturday's 9 p.m. opening act to Whiskey Myers, Grammy-nominated country singer and songwriter Brent Cobb is also no stranger to the headliner or success. Cobb has written songs for mega artists like Luke Bryan, Kenny Chesney and Little Big Town while also collaborating with Whiskey Myers, including the duo's single The Good Ol Days.

Cobb's career as a singer took off in 2012 when he started opening for superstars Blake Shelton and Sara Evans. His second album, 2017's Shine on a Rainy Day, peaked at No. 17 on the Billboard Country music album chart. That same album earned Cobb a Grammy nomination in 2018 for Country Album of the Year.

His blue collar country style mixes with the fundamentals of bluegrass and is often compared to such greats as Merle Haggard and Willie Nelson.

"Brent Cobb was the first artist to accept an offer from us about appearing at Roostertail," Turner said. "He was the first artist for 2019 we got involved with and we are excited about having him. He's a Grammy-nominated guy who has earned himself a following and he's been heavily involved with some of the best in country music. I know that him and Whiskey Myers have toured together so we are hoping the two will get together during the festival and perform."

Saturday's music begins at 2 p.m. with Brent Mathis followed by 16 Bones and rock group Edgar Red. Justin Wells and American Aquarium will take the stage prior to Brent Cobb.

"We know some qualifying and other things will be going on in the water while we start the Saturday music but that means there will be plenty of entertainment when there is no action on the water," Turner said. "Bicentennial Park is a great place to view the fireworks, too, and we will break from the music between 10 and 10:30 for those. That will be our 30-minute intermission between Brent Cobb and Whiskey Myers."

Turner said all entertainment on Thursday is free thanks to a sponsorship by Craig Toyota. Local act The Famous Amy Noel performs at 5 p.m. followed by the group Steamship. Louisville-based Nick Dittmeier and the Sawdusters, a two-time Roostertail performer, takes the stage at 8 p.m. as the opener for another highly-demanded group, The High Divers.

"This is our second year of the festival doing entertainment on Thursday and we are very grateful for Craig Toyota sponsoring the event so that this night can be free to the public. We had a great response from our fans last year when The High Divers performed so this is an opportunity for them to headline a night with what should be a large crowd," Turner said.

In addition to the music, there will be food and beverage vendors just outside Bicentennial Park and along West Street which will now be inside the blueprint of the music festival. Two food trucks will be parked along West Street and serve both food and beverages to go along with soft drink and water stations around the concert venue. Alcohol vendors will include West Fork Whiskey out of Indianapolis, North Vernon Beverage, Mad Paddle Brewery and Rhinegeist.

Alcoholic beverages will only be permitted outside Bicentennial Park or within designated areas around the venue. No outside alcohol can be carried into the music venue even though alcohol is allowed into the nearby Madison Regatta spectator areas along the riverfront.

"We want everybody to have a good time," Turner said. "The biggest thing I can tell you is to be there early, get yourself a seat and enjoy the festival. Plenty of great music, plenty of great food and beverages and of course all the other attractions of the Madison Regatta. This is going to be fun."

New H1 executive director Perry says ‘trust’ the key to getting teams rowing the boat in same direction

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Capt. Ron Perry has been inside the sport of Unlimited hydroplane racing in a way few others can relate. As the representative for the Air National Guard, which served as the title sponsor for H1 Unlimited in 2011 and 2012, Perry got a chance to see both the good — and the bad — that the sport can deliver on a daily basis.

It is for that reason — maybe even in spite of it — Perry is back with the sport in 2019. After hanging up his captain’s bars, Perry joined H1 as the organization’s executive director in early May.

Perry fully knows the monumental task that awaits him when it comes to rebuilding the sport. But he’s confident that the job can be accomplished.

“If we actually run this professionally, like you would any other sport that we’ve been involved in, this thing can totally take off on its own without the crutch of having to worry about a sponsor falling in love and out of love,” Perry said. “ We can make money for businesses that invest in this, we really can. It just takes doing things correctly and doing things keeping in mind that fans are going to enjoy things as well as sponsors. If the fans don’t enjoy it, the sponsors will walk away. I would.”

Returning the sport to its glory days is not something that can be done overnight. While the sport made advances in the past year under interim chairman Charlie Grooms, it still has a long way to go to return to the era where the boats competed in 10-12 races each season with five or six major national sponsors and TV coverage on ESPN.

Perry knows this and accepts it. But he will not be alone in his quest to save the sport. His wife Kristine Perry has joined the organization as Associate Executive Director and brings additional experience badly needed by the sport.

Kristine Perry also has worked with H1 before. From 2011-13 she served as marketing manager and from 2014-15 she was the Director of Marketing and Administration. Since leaving H1 the first time, Kristine has complated her master’s degree in sports management from George Washington University and worked with both the Maryland Black Bears hockey team and the Maryland Blue Crabs baseball team in the marketing departments.

“We probably have 35 years of marketing experience between the two of us,” Ron Perry said. “It was very fortunate timing for us. She had just finished working with the hockey team and she had been wanting to get back in the sport in some way, form or fashion. She really wanted another crack and making this thing work.”

AIRGUARD CHAMPIONSHIP

H1 Unlimited executive director Ron Perry

For Perry, the top priority in fixing the sport comes at a more macro level than simply boat count or adding race sites. It comes down to repairing relationships that have been fractured over the past 25 years.

Ever since the late 1990s when Gary Garbrecht’s Hydro-Prop organization ran the sport, there has been a been a serious chasm between management and the boat teams themselves. A break from Hydro-Prop in 2004 led to creation of H1 Unlimited (called the American Boat Racing Association at first), an organization that was led by the boat owners themselves. Former Madisonian Sam Cole was named chairman of the new organization but Cole was limited in what he could do by the boat owners themselves and his rocky tenure ended in 2014.

Former Miss Madison driver Steve David followed Cole but was gone after two years. Doug Bernstein, a member of the Detroit River Racing Association, lasted only a few months on the job before Grooms took over in 2017.

While Perry believes each of his predecessors had the skills necessary to run the sport, they each lacked one essential ingredient: Trust.

“That’s the underlying tone to every phone call I’ve had for the past two months. ‘Hey, let me tell you about this time that somebody shorted me 50 bucks,’ or whatever,” Perry said. “A lot of what I have been doing is lending an ear and trying to build trust back into what H1 is really supposed to be.”

Along with rebuilding the relationships, Perry also has his eyes toward streamlining the racing itself and making the experience even better for the fans.

H1 Unlimited has used drones in lieu of helicopters at times over the past few seasons but Perry plans on going full-in with live video streaming from drones that will allow referees to make calls in real time. Gone will be the days of waiting for the helicopter to land and an official to get back to the tech truck in order to review video of an incident and then make a judgment call.

“We’re going to have a truck with two 50-inch TVs and the officials can sit in there and watch the race as it happens,” Perry said. “And that video will be available to anybody who wants it.”

Perry also wants to use existing telemetry technology to not only help officials make calls, but to allow fans a real-time look into what is happening on the race course.

“We have the technology right now to make the calls using telemetry and we can do it in real-time,” Perry said. “If somebody jumps the gun, we’ll know it. If somebody leaves their line or hits somebody, we can tell who’s fault it is by looking at the telemetry. And I want to make that available on the app so that fans can watch it at the same time and see what’s happening on the race course.

“We’ve used that in other motorsports I’ve been involved in and it’s been wildly popular. I think it’s a tremendous way to grow the sport,” Perry added. “The only thing we need is a sponsor for it and that’s what I’ve been looking for. So if anybody wants to step up, let me know.”

The 2019 H1 Unlimited Series season begins this weekend in Guntersville, Alabama, and moves to Madison the following weekend for the APBA Gold Cup. Perry can’t wait for the season to start and while he has received nearly universal support since his hiring, he is realistic about what lies ahead.

“Kristine and I coming in, knowing everybody and nobody hates us, that’s a big thing and a good start,” Perry added with a laugh. “I’m sure that will last until the second heat at Guntersville.”

Hoisting the Gold Cup a lifetime achievement

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

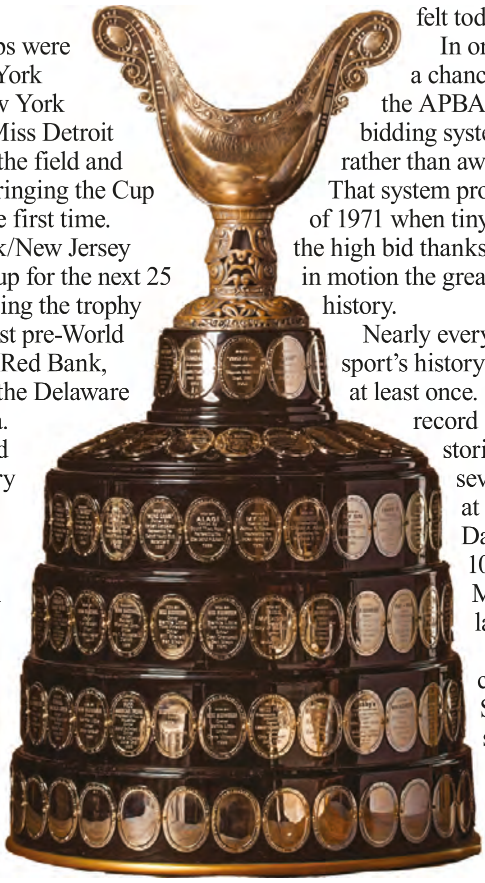
There isn't a hydroplane driver in the country that hasn't dreamed of winning the APBA Gold Cup. For most, it is a dream that never comes to reality. But for those special few that have had a chance to hoist the Cup above their head, nothing else comes close.

What is the Gold Cup and why is it so special? The answers lie in the vast history around the trophy and the men who have spent their lives — and some their fortunes — chasing it.

Officially called the American Power Boat Association Challenge Cup, the APBA Gold Cup was first contested in June of 1904 on the Hudson River in New York State. Wanting a traveling trophy to hand out to the winner of their annual summer regatta, the members of several yacht clubs throughout the northeast commissioned famed jewelry maker Tiffany to make a loving cup for $800.

The winner of that first race, Carl Riotte's Standard, averaged just over 23 mph. Three months later, there was a second race, this time won by Willis Kilmer in the Vingt-Et-Un II. That first year was the only time the Gold Cup was contested twice in one year.

Under Gold Cup rules at the time, the winning boat owner got the option of defending the Cup the next year at their home yacht club and it was that system that created the rivalries that still exist today.



The first 13 Gold Cups were each contested in New York State, mainly in the New York City area. In 1915, the Miss Detroit traveled east to take on the field and picked up the victory, bringing the Cup to the Motor City for the first time.

Detroit and New York/New Jersey battled over the Gold Cup for the next 25 years, taking turns swiping the trophy from their rivals. The last pre-World War II race was held in Red Bank, New Jersey, just across the Delaware River from Philadelphia.

World War II changed everything in the country and hydroplane racing was no different. The Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association combined with the APBA after the war resulting in the current Unlimited class.

Detroit dominated the early post-war era but in 1950, Ted Jones brought his Slo-Mo-Shun IV to Michigan and won the first Gold Cup for the city of Seattle. That victory set off a new rivalry between the midwest and the west coast that can still be felt today.

In order to give more sites a chance to host the Gold Cup, the APBA decided to go to a bidding system in the mid-1960s, rather than awarding it to the winner. That system proved pivotal in the winter of 1971 when tiny Madison, Indiana won the high bid thanks to a technicality and set in motion the greatest story in the sport's history.

Nearly every great driver in the sport's history has won the Gold Cup at least once. Chip Hanauer won a record 11 Gold Cups in his storied career, including seven-straight in the 1980s at five different sites. Dave Villwock picked up 10 Gold Cups and Bill Muncey won seven, his last in Madison in 1979.

On the other side of the coin is Jim Kropfeld and Steve David, the fifth and sixth winningest drivers in the sport's history. Kropfeld won 22 races in his illustrious career, which happened to coincide with Hanauer's run in the 1980s and never won the Cup. David has 18 wins, but also finished second in the Gold Cup eight times.

"I'm the Chip Hanauer of placing second," David once joked.

Jim McCormick's win in 1971 aboard the Miss Madison may have been the most famous, but Terry Troxell's victory aboard the Spirit of Detroit in 2005 was by far the most improbable. Owner Dave Bartush took possession of the boat on Friday of race weekend and had only one engine and one propeller. Troxell, who was hired that day, made it work and claimed the win.

Eight years later, Troxell's son-in-law scored his own improbable win when Kip Brown steered the Spirit of Qatar to victory. It was the only win of Brown's career but one he will savor for a lifetime.

"I could quit today and be remembered as one of the good ones," Brown said. "That's something that is humbling and overwhelming."

Detroit native Mark Tate won two Gold Cups — in 1991 and 1994 — and 25 years later was dockside as his son Andrew won his first a year ago. When the reality of what he had accomplished sunk in, the younger Tate broke down in tears.

"You watch guys lift this trophy year after year and how much it means to them. I can't describe it," Andrew Tate said at the time. "As a little kid you don't appreciate it and how hard it is to win it. It's a dream come true."

It's a dream every driver shares and only few achieve and it's what keeps them coming back every year.

Driver Jimmy Shane had the Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison flies high over the Ohio River while charging to an Indiana Governor's Cup win over runner-up Andrew Tate and the Delta/Realtrac (background) last year. However, it proved to be the only race the defending national champion won on the season as Tate swept all five of the other events to claim his first National High Points title and end Miss Madison Racing's string of consecutive championships at four. Miss Madison Racing looking for bounceback 2019 season for Shane, Miss HomeStreetBank

Whatever could go wrong did go wrong for the Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison team in 2018, which saw its string of national championships snapped at four-straight and will enter a season wearing the team's traditional "U-6" number for the first time since 2014.

But the team is back and is ready to reclaim its accustomed spot at the top of the standings. A busy offseason paid off in an impressive test session on the Columbia River at Tri-Cities last month and everybody involved is hungry and excited to open the season.

U-6

"We're not at all happy about what happened last year. We're very cognizant of why it happened. Some of it was self-inflicted, some of it was just circumstances," Miss Madison President Charlie Grooms said. "But we are focused this year."

Last year started with a black cloud over the team after the sudden death of crew chief Dan Hoover in February and never got better even with the debut of a new boat at mid-season. Two disqualifications at the season opener in Guntersville, Alabama, put the boat in a points hole and ended up haunting the team in the end as driver Jimmy Shane was able to post only one win in six races as he surrendered his crown to Andrew Tate and the Jones Racing.

There has been more upheaval this season. Cindy Shirley, who replaced Hoover as crew chief, resigned in April due to work commitments, and the team has yet to name an official replacement. Mike Hanson, a former driver and crew chief, has been heading the team so far and will likely fill that role when the season begins.

But despite Shirley's departure, everything is full steam ahead for the team. Shane posted seven laps all faster than 160 mph during the test session, including a top speed of over 164 that would have bested the top qualifying speed on the course by 4 mph last year.

"We had a really aggressive agenda (for the day) and somehow we pulled it off," Grooms said. "I couldn't be happier with the way it ran, the way things happened and what we learned. It was all we hoped for."

The team heads into the season opener at Guntersville as the favorite to claim the Southern Cup. Tate charged from behind to nip Shane on the final lap to win there a year ago, but it sounds like Tate and his U-1 Jones Racing team may be skipping the event this year.

After Guntersville, the team will set its sights on the APBA Gold Cup, which will be contested in Madison for the first time since 1980. Shane, who won at Madison last year, has three Gold Cup wins in his career and the team will be seeking its fourth crown.

Although nothing could be confirmed by presstime, Miss Madison fans could have two boats to root for at this year's APBA Gold Cup.

According to Grooms, Miss Madison Inc. has been negotiating with a sponsor to run its 2007-vintage Unlimited this season. Grooms did not specify the sponsor or the length of the contract, but he did say he would be interested in helping out Madison Regatta, his home course, by running a second boat.

If the second Miss Madison does compete, it would be a serious contender to win the crown with 24 wins and eight National High Points championships — the last in 2017. It started last season as the team's primary hull, but was replaced by the newer boat after the third race.

No driver has been attached to the boat but there will be no shortage of applicants for the ride. The team would also have to field a second crew in order to run the boat. The number the boat would carry is also in question, but H1 has it listed as the U-66 on its preseason team bios.

The 2007 Miss Madison did not make the trip to the preseason testing or the season opener in Guntersville, Alabama, but was being readied for the rest of the season.

Tate, Jones Racing face uncertain future after 'dream' season in 2018

By DAVID CAMPBELL

Andrew Tate and the U-9 Jones Racing Team had one of those seasons in 2018 that one only dreams about. Tate won five of the six races on the H1 Unlimited schedule — including the APBA Gold Cup in his hometown Detroit — and rolled to his, and his team's, first-ever National High Points Championship.

U-1

But whether or not the team will be able to defend that title is up in the air. Crew chief Jeff Campbell and his brother Mike both retired in the offseason and owners Mike and Lori Jones were noncommittal about whether or not they would race the full season. With only one week to go before the season opener, that question still hasn't been answered.

If they do run, Tate and the now U-1 Jones Racing are a formidable force. Since debuting on the H1 circuit in 2016, Tate has won eight of the 16 races he has entered, a .500 winning percentage that is matched by only Dave Villwock over the past 30 years.

Most of those wins came last year when Tate took advantage of mistakes by Jimmy Shane and the Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison to dominate the circuit.

The season started with an exciting win at Guntersville, Alabama where Tate rallied on the last lap to nip Shane at the wire. After Shane claimed victory at Madison, penalties and mistakes took him out of the next four races and Tate easily picked up wins at the Tri-Cities, Seattle, Detroit and San Diego.

While the team has yet to announce whether it will run at either Guntersville or Madison, they are expected to be at the Washington state races

Henderson, Spirit of Detroit ready to be contender in 2019

After two years of being a one-race team, the Detroit-based U-7 Spirit of Detroit team is ready to be a contender on the full H1 Unlimited circuit this season.

Canadian Bert Henderson, a former series champion in both the Grand Prix and Hydroplane Racing League ranks, will be in the seat full-time this season as owner Dave Bartush goes into the season with the best boat he has ever campaigned.

This year's U-7 entry should be more than familiar to race fans. Built in 1998 as the Miss Budweiser T-5 hull, the boat has won multiple national championships including the 2006 title as the U-7 Formulaboats.com II with Mike Allen aboard.

U-7

Bartush, who owns an extensive array of current and historic hydroplanes, purchased the T-5 from Ted Porter three years ago, but it's career as the Spirit of Detroit has been star-crossed at best.

Two years ago, Henderson got into a nasty collision with J. Michael Kelly and the U-12 Graham Trucking before the start of the final heat at Detroit and ripped the lid off the canopy of Henderson's craft. Thanks to the safety systems in place, Henderson was uninjured.

At last year's Detroit race, Henderson was disqualified before the final for entering the restricted area on the course.

While this year will mark Henderson's first as a full-time driver in the Unlimited ranks, he is one of the most experienced pilots in the fleet.

In over 20 years of driving in the smaller classes, Henderson has won series championships at the 2.5 Litre Stock, 5-Litre and Grand Prix levels. He won five of the eight races in the HRL's Grand Prix series in 2017 to run away with that championship.

Bartush entered the competitive ranks as an owner in a big way, winning the APBA Gold Cup in Detroit in 2005 with Terry Troxell driving. Bartush had taken ownership of the former Winston Eagle/Smokin' Joe's hull the weekend of the race.

This season will mark the first time since 2009 that Bartush's team has run the full circuit.

U-11 J&D's hoping to carry over momentum from '18

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

After years of coming close, the U-11 J&D's team finally broke through with its most successful season to date in 2018. While driver Tom Thompson did not win a final heat, he did pick up his first-ever preliminary heat wins and finished third in the National High Points.

With that momentum behind them, the U-11 team is hoping for bigger and better things in 2019 as once again they will make the entire circuit.

Co-owner and crew chief Scott Raney is one of the most highly respected hydro guys in the business, even earning the nickname "Pyro" from his peers. Quick to help out other teams when they need a hand, Raney can often be seen running from pit stall to pit stall during race weekend, troubleshooting along the way.

But getting his own team in line has proven to be more difficult for Raney. Raney and wife Shannon branched out on their own after a successful run with Billy Schumacher's U-37 team, but have had nothing but bad luck after bad luck along the way.

There have been flips and penalties, bad heat draws and engine failures as the under-funded team has tried to find its way in a sport that rewards deep pockets. With the sponsorships of J&D's Hydraulic and Reliable Diamond Tool a year ago, the team finally began to see the light at the end of the tunnel. Both of those sponsors are back with the U-11 team this season.

With those resources in place, Thompson and the U-11 team are the trending pick by many in the sport to break through to victory lane and for good reason. Thompson broke a 112-heat winless streak to start his career with four wins last year and finished third overall in three of the five races. With a little more luck, the team could hoist a big trophy this year.

Graham Trucking to field two-boat program in 2019

Kelly to chase title in U-12

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

U-12

After a season that saw them compete in only the Washington state races, the U-12 Graham Trucking entry is back for the full campaign and is ready to shake up the National High Point standings.

Rob Graham purchased the former Miss Budweiser T-6 hull and the requisite equipment from Ted Porter after the 2016 season and ran the full circuit that first year, picking up a win at the Tri-Cities in his first race as an owner.

Driver J. Michael Kelly and the U-12 finished third in the National High Points that season, but Graham opted to run at only Tri-Cities and Seattle in 2018, sending one of the circuit's top contenders to the shore for most of the season.

But Graham has committed to running the full campaign in 2019 meaning fans should see some exciting racing throughout the season.

The 2017 season was characterized by an impressive three-way duel between Kelly, Jimmy Shane and the Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison and Andrew Tate in the Jones Racing. The three young drivers battled deck-to-deck throughout all five races with Shane and Tate each winning twice and Kelly claiming one win.

That three-way dynamic was missing in 2019 when penalties and mechanical woes doomed Shane's chances and Tate ran away with the National title with five wins in six races. In Kelly's two appearances, he finished second and third.

Kelly debuted on the H1 circuit in 2002 and his nine career wins are second to only Shane's 17 among active drivers. He won the APBA Gold Cup in 2016. Along the way he has driven for several different owners, including Jim Harvey, Dave Bartush, Billy Schumacher and Porter, and has had Rob Graham along for the ride most of the way. An owner of a trucking fleet in the Pacific Northwest and a life-long family friend, Graham has sponsored each of Kelly's H1 rides with the exception of his three-year stint with Schumacher Racing.

Peabody back in U-98 cockpit

Fans at Madison got a chance to see young up-and-coming driver Aaron Salmon qualify for the H1 series last year when he completed the requisite laps aboard the U-99.9 Miss Rock.

While Salmon will not be back this season, his boat will be as U-12 Graham Trucking owner Rob Graham purchased the boat and all of the equipment from the estate of the late Stacey Briseno and has rechristened the boat as the U-98 Graham Trucking in honor of Graham's first year in business, 1998.

Graham's original plan was to use the U-98 as a back-up boat and run it only at the Washington state races. But after a test session in the Tri-Cities in late May, Graham decided to take the boat on the full circuit to help fill out the fields.

Driving the boat will be rookie Corey Peabody, who actually got his feet wet as an Unlimited driver in 2016 when he qualified as a driver and competed in the APBA Gold Cup at Detroit aboard the U-57 Spirit of Detroit for owner Dave Bartush. He recorded two thirds and a fourth place in preliminary heat action but failed to make the final.

Because he has not competed in three races, Peabody is still considered a rookie according to H1 Unlimited rules.

An elementary school classmate of teammate J. Michael Kelly, driver of the U-12 Graham Trucking, Peabody has been racing outboard hydroplanes alongside Kelly since 1998. Longtime hydroplane crewman, Brooke Tyler IV will serve as the crew chief for the U-98 team.

Bucket List Racing's former G-Class hydroplane (above) is slightly smaller than the other Unlimiteds and runs a smaller version of the Lycoming turbine engine — a T-53 compared to the T-55 the rest of the fleet uses — but driver Bert Henderson (right) pushed the boat to a heat win and its fastest speeds ever in 2018 and hopes for even more in 2019. (Courier file photos)

No Unlimited team has been more of a labor of love than the U-440 Bucket List Racing Team, which has spent the past eight years trying to take an undersized and underpowered boat and make it competitive.

But all of that hard work appears to be paying off and after a successful 2018 campaign that saw the team post its first-ever preliminary heat win (at Madison) and finish fourth in the National High Points, this could be a big year for the "Little Boat That Could."

Unlimited veteran Kelly Stocklin purchased the current Bucket List boat in 2012. A former G-Class boat, it was designed to run in a smaller class that used automotive engines, not unlike the current Grand Prix World series boats.

Stocklin's idea was to outfit the boat with a Lycoming T-53 turbine engine, a smaller version of the T-55s that the rest of the fleet used. The T-53 puts out less power, but it also weighs considerably less and Stocklin hoped that the difference would allow his boat to be competitive with the larger competitors.

But finding speed wasn't easy. Through the first six years, the team barely qualified over 110 mph and was usually much slower during actual racing where driver Dustin Echols often found himself a lap down before he completed a circuit.

That all changed in 2018. Echols steered the bright orange craft to a qualifying speed of over the H1-mandated minimum of 130 mph at the season opener in Guntersville, Alabama and the boat only got faster. Earlier this month in a test at the Tri-Cities, Washington, Echols posted a speed of 137.112, the fastest the boat has ever gone.

Despite the increase in speed, the team remains committed to its plan. Always realistic, nobody on the team expects to win a national title or even compete for a race victory. But taking a boat that few thought had any business of being on the water and making it competitive is a win in itself.

The APBA Gold Cup at Madison

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

The 1971 Gold Cup trophy presentation to driver Jim McCormick and Miss Madison Racing.

Most conversations on the history of the APBA Gold Cup at Madison naturally center on the historic 1971 race and for good reason. Underdog Jim McCormick steered the hometown Miss Madison to an exciting win in front of a national audience on ABC's Wide World of Sports, inspiring a generation of hydroplane fans from coast to coast.

But that 1971 race isn't the only time the APBA Gold Cup has been hosted by Madison. The oldest trophy in motorsports has been contested on the "Wild" Bill Cantrell Race Course two other times prior to this season, in 1979 and 1980.

Here's a look back at all three historic Gold Cups on the Ohio River at Madison:

1971

JIM MCCORMICK — MISS MADISON
(Champion)

By now, everybody must be familiar with the famed 1971 race, considered by many in the sport to be the most famous race in the circuit's history. And for those who weren't alive to witness the race, the movie "Madison" helped fill in some of the blanks with a little bit of cinematic license along the way.

The fact that Madison was even hosting the Gold Cup in 1971 was a fluke in itself. For the first 60 years the event was contested, the winner of the Cup got to decide where the next year's race would be held, often on their home course. The APBA changed that in the 1960s, making the event available to the highest bidder.

Madison often bid on the rights to the race but never came close to winning as bigger cities like Detroit and Seattle had deeper pockets and could easily offer more. But an administrative mistake on the calendar in 1971 led to Madison's $30,000 offer being the only bid that got in on time and the Cup ended up coming to the Ohio Valley.

You can view video of the ABC Wide World of Sports broadcast of the 1971 Gold Cup at Madison on You Tube at: www.youtube.com/watch?v=rgENqqz0clE

With the Gold Cup on its home course, the Miss Madison Racing Team was determined to put on a good show. McCormick brought in experts Harry Volpi and Everett Adams from the defunct Tahoe Miss team to oversee the team's engine program and the team got off to a great start to the season, competing for the win in each of the first three races.

To win at Madison, McCormick and the team would have to overcome one of the toughest fields in memory. Dean Chenoweth and the Miss Budweiser were the defending National and Madison champions, legendary Bill Muncey was already a force in the Atlas Van Lines, Terry Sterett was a threat each time out in the Atlas Van Lines II and Billy Schumacher was a frequent podium visitor in the Pride of Pay n' Pak.

Almost from the start, things began to fall Miss Madison's way. Both the Hallmark Homes and The Smoother Mover entries sank during wrecks in preliminary heats, Muncey was disqualified from the race after Heat 2B when he cut off another boat — his third such offense at that point of the season — and Chenoweth's Miss Budweiser was off its game all day.

A lot of things went right that Fourth of July to allow the Miss Madison to win, but it wasn't just luck that carried McCormick to the winner's circle. In fact, it appeared that the team was destined to finish in second place.

Sterett had bested McCormick twice in preliminary heats aboard the Atlas II and took a 100-point lead into the final heat. In those days, the winner of the race was whichever boat accumulated the most points and McCormick needed a win in the final to claim the Gold Cup.

Getting a win proved not to be a problem. Thanks to the magic of Volpi and Adams, the Miss Madison was a rocket that afternoon. McCormick secured lane one for the final, overtook Sterett just after the first turn and ran away from the field, winning the race in a rout. Sterett finished second with Chenoweth third. Schumacher ran fourth and Fred Alter was fifth in the Towne Club.

"They said it's ready to go. Let it all hang out. We either win it or we blow. You can't believe how happy we are ... we are going to celebrate," McCormick would say after the win.

McCormick and the Miss Madison proved the victory was no fluke by winning the very next race at the Tri-Cities and going on to finish second in the National High Points standings, the team's highest finish ever until Steve David steered the boat its first national title in 2008.

BILL MUNCEY — ATLAS VAN LINES
(Champion)

Muncey was in the midst of a multi-season run where he was nearly unbeatable and that didn't change when the circuit arrived in Madison for the APBA Gold Cup.

The Atlas Van Lines "Blue Blaster" had debuted a season and a half earlier and had run circles around the competition. The only hope the field had at besting Muncey was to hope for a mechanical failure.

There would be no such gremlins for the Blue Blaster on this day as Muncey ran roughshod over the competition. Only an impressive performance by Steve Reynolds in the Miss Circus Circus in Heat 2B kept Muncey from a total sweep. Reynolds steered the bright pink Circus to a winning speed of 113.708 mph in that heat, compared to 111.987 by Muncey, both incredibly fast speeds for the day.

But there would be no magic in the final. Muncey rolled past the field quickly and easily, beating Reynolds by nearly 6 mph to claim what proved to be the last Gold Cup of his storied career. Just over two years later, Muncey was killed in a racing crash at Acapulco, Mexico.

Reynolds finished second while young wunderkind Chip Hanauer was third aboard the Squire Shop. Bob Maschmedt ran fourth in the Dr. Toyota.

Any hopes of a repeat win by the Miss Madison were dashed early. Driver Milner Irvin steered the U-6 to a third place finish in Heat 1B, but placed fourth in Heat 2B and failed to start Heat 3A, keeping the team from making the five-boat final. Another local team, the Miss Kentuckiana Paving with Madison's Jon Peddie driving, also failed to make the final.

1980

DEAN CHENOWETH — MISS BUDWEISER
(Champion)

Modern fans who bemoan any hydroplane race with less than 12 entrants, would surely feel the pain for fans who made the trip to Madison for the Gold Cup in 1980.

While 10 boats showed up in the pits for the race, only eight posted qualifying speeds and just five of those

Grand Prix World series to bring rumble to the river

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

The automotive-powered Grand Prix World Supercharged class hydroplanes are back in Madison for a fourth-straight year promising to bring more noise and deck-to-deck racing to the Madison Regatta.

The boats in this series are only slightly smaller than the faster Unlimiteds with several looking nearly identical to their bigger counterparts. But the GPW make up for their smaller size with louder engines that will bounce sound off of the Ohio River Valley hills.

Former Unlimited driver Jamie Nielson steered his GP-55 Cabo Marine to victory at Madison last year and comes into the race with plenty of confidence. His team owner, Scott Pierce, won the 1988 Indiana Governor's Cup while behind the wheel of the Mr. Pringle's.

But there are plenty of boats and drivers eager to knock Nielson off his perch, led by fan favorite Ed Preston.

Preston, nicknamed the Silver Mullet because of his choice in hairstyle, steered the GP-20 Blown Income Racing to the GPW National High Points title a year ago. It was the first national crown in the series for both the team and Preston.

Two other drivers who will be sure to challenge for the trophy are the father-son duo of Jerry and Greg Hopp, long considered the powerhouses of the circuit.

Jerry, who has been called the World's Fastest Grandpa, has won races at virtually every level of the sport. Greg, who spent more than a decade driving Unlimiteds for owner Fred Leland, has dominated both Grand Prix levels.

Another boat that always catches fans' attention is the GP-74 Premonition, owned and driven by Rob Hall. The boat was built by Staudacher Hydroplanes in Michigan and features an out-riggered sponson, unique among the modern grand prix and Unlimited classes in the US.

Grand Prix World organizers have said that up to 10 boats will be in the pits race weekend at Madison but that list had not been finalized at presstime. The series opens the season June 28-30 in Guntersville, Alabama.

Race was called after the first two sets of preliminary heats.

•Gold Cup at Madison

answered the call for the first set of heats. Among those that were left on the dock were Chip Hanauer in the Squire Shop, who qualified but was unable to race after the boat caught fire during morning testing.

Because of the small field, the race was broken up into three preliminary heats of five boats each and a final, giving fans only four total races. And none of those races were even close as Dean Chenoweth laid waste to the field in his Miss Budweiser, aptly nicknamed the "Juggernaut." The Rolls Royce Griffin-powered boat also rumbled to a record 20-straight heat wins to start the season.

Chenoweth's only real competition came in the form of Bill Muncey, who had won the last three Gold Cups aboard the Atlas Van Lines "Blue Blaster" and was the two-time defending national champion.

But even Muncey couldn't slow Chenoweth's charge. "Dapper Dean" won the first heat by 2.5 mph, then romped in the next two, besting Muncey 111 mph to 106 mph in Heat 2 and 112 mph to 106 mph in Heat 3.

The final heat was even more of a rout. Chenoweth, who was obviously holding back earlier in the day, averaged 117.391 mph over the five laps compared to just 94.060 mph for Muncey.

The other three boats in the field were relegated to a good view of the action from far behind. Steve Reynolds, whose Miss Circus Circus failed to start or finish any of the preliminary heats, ended up placing third in the final while Milner Irvin steered the Miss Madison to two third places and a fourth place in the final.

Another local boat, the Miss Kentuckiana Paving driven by Madison's Jon Peddie, garnered two fourths and a third place in preliminary heats and was fifth in the final.
